

JUDGE NEWMAN'S FRIENDS TO TENDER HIM DINNER

Jurist Yields to Urgent Requests Not to Retire From Bench

An informal meeting of some of the friends of Judge William T. Newman was held on yesterday at the Capital city club in order to perfect details for the banquet to be tendered Judge Newman in celebration of his seventieth birthday.

Judge Newman has for more than thirty years filled the position of judge of the United States district court for the northern district of Georgia and by virtue of his recent birthday became automatically entitled to retirement from the bench at full pay.

Upon the urgent solicitation of many of the citizens residing in his district, including many of the members of the bar practicing before him, Judge Newman has decided to forego the privilege conferred by statute and will indefinitely continue to discharge the duties devolving upon his position.

BAUQUET OCTOBER 25.
The meeting decided to fix the date of the banquet for Saturday, October 25, at 6 o'clock p. m., at the Capital city club and the friends of the judge, including members of the local bar, will be invited to attend.

Elaborate arrangements are being made to insure the success of the banquet, the details of which have been carefully considered and placed in charge of various committees appointed by the meeting as follows:

Committee on Arrangements—Albert Howell, Jr., chairman; J. D. Little, Alex C. King, Alex W. Smith, Reuben Arnold, R. C. Alston, J. W. English, Invitation Committee—J. D. Little, chairman; C. T. Hopkins, H. E. W. Palmer, W. C. Colquhoun, Marion Smith, Daniel Bryan, Harold Hirsch.

Speakers Committee—Alex C. King, chairman; J. Carroll Payne, S. R. Atkinson, S. N. Evans, Burton Smith, Harriet Jones, Hamilton Douglas, Eugene Dadd.

Finance Committee—Alex W. Smith, chairman; E. Watkins, H. C. Peoples, W. E. Brown, D. W. Rountree, E. E. Fumery, W. A. Winchell.

Committee on Program—R. C. Alston, chairman; Morris Brandon, E. B. Alston, Rufus Randolph, A. J. Orme, Eugene Dadd.

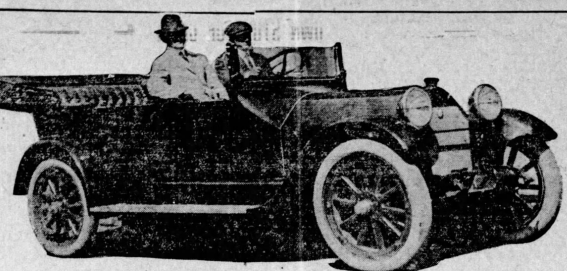

Committee on Local Bar—Reuben R. Arnold, chairman; John W. Moore, George Westendorp, W. B. Hammond, T. B. Fidler, A. Meyer, Can Dorsey.

Committee on Citizens—J. W. Engle, chairman; J. G. Oglesby, Charles Howell, R. F. Maddox, J. R. Gray, Dr. W. S. Eldin, R. J. Lowry.

Bankruptcy Petition
The Griffith & Smith Co., a firm composed of J. B. and C. P. Griffith and Watt H. Smith, has filed a voluntary bankruptcy petition. Its liabilities are $124 and its assets $151.

Charles A. Ridley, of Bremen, a farmer, also filed a petition. His liabilities are $5,501 and assets $40.

FIRST "SHOW ME" CLAIMERS CAR IS HERE

The first 1914 Model 24 Chalmers car to reach Atlanta is shown in the picture. The handsome machine, while built in Michigan—not Missouri—has been christened the "Show Me" car. In the machine is C. F. Jamison, who has recently been named district sales manager for the Chalmers Motor Car company for the southeastern states. Mr. Jamison is going to make his headquarters in Atlanta, having selected this city after looking over all of the big cities in the territory. The only city which even gave Atlanta a "run for the money" according to the new manager, was Jacksonville, Fla., which, he says, is fast becoming an automobile center. While he is going to open a big division office here in the near future, Mr. Jamison is at present making his headquarters with John M. Smith, local agent for the Chalmers. Seated at the wheel of the "Show Me" car with Mr. Jamison is J. M. Brownlee, Jr., a well-known Atlanta automobile dealer.

EIGHT-YEAR-OLD LAD CRUSHED UNDER ICE VAN Bobbie Bolles, Son of Stephen Bolles, Suffers Painful Injuries

With both his right arm and foot badly crushed and bruises about his head and body, little Bobbie Bolles, eight years, lies in bed at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Bolles, 81 North avenue, as the result of being struck and run over by a loaded ice wagon belonging to the southern ice company and said to have been driven by Brooks Foster, a negro man.

The accident occurred late in the afternoon on North avenue between the Peachtree and near fire engine house No. 11. Bobbie and some other children were playing in the park when the heavy wagon was driven down the street. According to witnesses, the child was struck by the tongue and knocked under the wheels. When picked up he was in a semi-conscious condition, but was soon revived by the attending physician. His injuries are considered more painful than serious, the principal hurts being to the arm and foot over which the heavy wheels passed.

Mr. Bolles also filed a petition. His liabilities are $5,501 and assets $40.

Giants Will Win Say Federal Prisoners

In the opinion of a majority of the prisoners at the United States federal penitentiary here the New York Giants will defeat the Athletics of Philadelphia in the coming world series. The prisoners are close followers of the national game and have their own league with games played each Saturday in the prison yard. The view of the majority, however, is not shared by the sporting editor of Good Words, the official newspaper of the penitentiary. He thinks the Athletics will outguess the New Yorkers. In the current issue of the paper the sporting editor writes:

"The followers of the game here are fast lining up for the world series, with a majority seeming to favor the Giants to win. This scribble picks the Athletics, as he believes they have more sand in their composition than the New Yorkers, and are less liable to break under the strain occasioned by a series of long games for the championship of the world and the attendant thought of the long end of the gate money. The deputy warden will arrange to have the result of the game, with the batteries of each game and other important details, announced daily in the dining room at the supper hour."

Camp Ties Anderson Meets

N. Y. Gann, commander of Camp Ties Anderson, United Confederate Veterans, announced yesterday that a meeting of the members from the state, as he believes they have more sand in their composition than the New Yorkers, and are less liable to break under the strain occasioned by a series of long games for the championship of the world and the attendant thought of the long end of the gate money. The deputy warden will arrange to have the result of the game, with the batteries of each game and other important details, announced daily in the dining room at the supper hour."

TRAPS NEGRESS WHO RAIDED HER WARDROBE

Mrs. Fred Echols Points Out Hiding Place of Woman Burglar

Hearing a noise in the back of her house at 194 Edgewood avenue at noon yesterday, Mrs. Fred Echols reached the back door just in time to see a negro girl disappear through the gate. She hurriedly followed the negress three blocks, catching a glimpse of her as she entered 87 Fort street.

Mrs. Echols then notified the police and two officers were sent to the Fort street address. There they arrested a woman who gave her name as Pearl Booth, eighteen years of age. A dress and skirt of Mrs. Echols was found in her possession. The officers stated that they also found between $25 and $30 worth of clothing in the house which they believe was stolen. The negress is held on suspicion.

STATE CHAMBER MEET PUT OFF INDEFINITELY

Charles D. McKinnon, acting secretary-manager of the Georgia chamber of commerce, announced yesterday that the meeting of the executive committee of the chamber, scheduled for October 6 at the Hotel Drexel, was postponed because of the absence of several of the members from the state. Another date will be set in the near future for the meeting to be held at the same place.

GERMAN EXPERT PRAISES ATLANTA SEWAGE PLANTS

Dr. Karl Imhoff Says Effluent of Proctor Disposal Plant Is Best He Ever Saw

High praise was given yesterday by Dr. Karl Imhoff, of Essen, Germany, to Atlanta's new sewage disposal plants. Dr. Imhoff holds the patent for the Imhoff tank, which has been constructed in each of the city's three plants. It was through his generosity and upon the request of his friend, Dr. Rudolph Hering, of New York, that the design of the patent was extended to Atlanta without royalty charge.

During the morning Dr. Imhoff visited the Proctor creek, Peachtree and Intrenchment creek disposal plants in that order, finding the first in operation, the second idle because the flow into it has been diverted temporarily by the city construction forces, and the third in process of construction.

"FINDEST I EVER SAW."
"This is the finest effluent I ever saw," said he, examining sewage which had passed through the Proctor creek plant. Inasmuch as he is a sanitary engineer whose name is known now in that science around the world, that praise from him placed Atlanta's disposal plant in an eminent position. He added that the effluent from the tanks at that scene around the world, that praise from him placed Atlanta's disposal plant in an eminent position. He added that the effluent from the tanks at that scene around the world, that praise from him placed Atlanta's disposal plant in an eminent position.

He the best sewerage in Baltimore, said he, had found filter bed effluent even as good as this in Atlanta. But in Baltimore the sewage is highly filtered with clear water, and is used as yet for only 50,000 people. The Atlanta plant at Proctor creek, on the other hand, is designed for 30,000 people and is meeting every bit of that service, and the night soil of 30,000 people is being dumped into the water. Notwithstanding the strong sewage which it handles, the plant counts it operates so well that its effluent is claimed by Dr. Imhoff as the best he has ever seen.

BACKED BY ANALYSES.
Analyses which C. C. Hommon, engineer in charge of the plant, is making constantly bear out Dr. Imhoff's expert judgment. Mr. Hommon stated yesterday that the plant is 99 per cent efficient, the tanks taking out every particle of settleable solids and the filter beds ridding it of the matter in solution.

Imhoff made a close inspection at each of the three plants, expressing complete approval at all went. Captain R. M. Clayton, city chief of construction, and assistant W. A. Hansell, Jr., who supervised the construction of the plant, were with the visitor upon his inspection, and Captain Clayton was host of the party at luncheon afterward. Dr. Imhoff left at 2:45 o'clock. In the afternoon, returning to New York, he has been in the United States one week and has visited several plants which have installed his patent since Atlanta with one plant. In Europe there are some 126 of them.

GIRLS! HAVE BEAUTIFUL, CHARMING HAIR AND NO DANDRUFF—25-CENT DANDERINE

Try this! Doubles beauty of your hair and stops it falling out.

Your hair becomes light, wavy, fluffy, abundant and appears as soft, lustrous and beautiful as a young girl's after a "Danderine hair cleanse". Just try this—mix a little of the Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt and excessive oil

FEW MOMENTS! NO INDIGESTION OR SICK, DYSPEPTIC STOMACH—PAPE'S DIAPEPSIN

Digests all food, absorbs gases and stops fermentation at once.

Wonder what upset your stomach—what portion of the food did the damage—do you? Well, don't bother. If your stomach is in a revolt, if sour, gassy and upset, and what you just ate has fermented into a stubborn lump, your head dizzy and bitter, back aches and acetate undigested food, breath foul, tongue coated—just take Pape's Diapepsin, and in five minutes you will wonder what became of the trouble.

Stop, mother! It's cruel to force oil or Calomel into sick child's stomach

"California Syrup of Figs" can't harm tender stomach, liver, bowels

Look back at your childhood. Days remember the "physic" that mother insisted on—castor oil, calomel, cathartics. How you hated them, how you fought against taking them. With our children it's different. Mothers who cling to the old form of physic simply don't know what to do. The children's revolt is well founded. Their tender little "insides" are injured by them. If your child's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing give "California Syrup of Figs." Its action is positive, but gentle. Millions of mothers keep this harmless fruit laxative handy to keep children love to take it; that it never fails to cleanse the liver and bowels and sweeten food and that a teaspoonful given today saves a sick child tomorrow. It should be the first remedy given as it always does good, never any harm. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for the mother on each bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. See that it is made by "California Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

ASSOCIATED CHARITIES
CAMPAIGN OPENS MONDAYAtlanta Rotary Club Plans to Raise $1,200 Within the Next Two Days

The Atlanta Rotary club which started a campaign two weeks ago to raise $1,200 cash and keep the Associated Charities from going to the wall, has raised to date $1,743.83, and will begin to receive a whirlwind finish to get up the remaining $1,200 to complete the $3,000 in two days.

While the public at large has recognized the fact that the Rotarians were engaged in an emergency work and that the call was an emergency call, it is an exaggeration to say that two-thirds of the subscriptions made to this amount have come from men who have already contributed something to the regular course to the Associated Charities. It will be recalled that the Rotarians took this work because of the announcement that the Associated Charities was about to close because it could not collect some of the subscriptions on its books, and had $3,000 worth of debts it could not pay.

The success of the Rotary campaign and the certainty that the Associated Charities affairs will be tied over, is manifest, but over $1,200 has been raised from somewhere tomorrow and Tuesday. The Rotary has only 20 men in it working on this campaign and it is impossible to reach every individual direct who would probably like to help in this work.

Any one who cares to make a contribution, large or small to this fund is requested to telephone 176-21, at 176, or W. B. Sealrook, at 176, 1135.

RIFLE SHOOT OF FIFTH
DRAWS NEAR ITS CLOSE

The second week of the last period in the rifle shoot of the Fifth regiment, national guard of Georgia, begins Monday. Major Hendrix's battalion was on the range last week and will follow this week with Major Catron's battalion. Major Freeman's battalion will finish the period during the week of October 20.

The scores for the month of September have not been compiled, but up to the beginning of September the standing was as follows: In the first battalion company C led in greatest number of men firing and in greatest number of hits. In the second battalion company M led in greatest number of hits, while company B qualified the greatest number of men. With respect to hitting the first led in greatest number of hits, the third in greatest number of hits, the fourth in greatest number of hits. In all probability the figures had been changed during September, while the October work will doubtless give still other changes. Colonel H. Hall stated that in all probability the figures had been changed during September, while the October work will doubtless give still other changes. Colonel H. Frank G. Carpenter Will Tell Journal Readers of South American People

New Stories of a New World
Will Be Told in Remarkable
Series of Articles Soon to Appear

Upon the opening of the Panama canal Frank G. Carpenter will begin a trip of 25,000 miles through South America, to write for The Journal.

His articles upon the people and the resources of this new frontier of the United States will begin in The Journal in January and will continue throughout the year.

They will prove to be the most important and interesting letters of travel that are printed during the next twelve months.

South America is the new world of the century. It has the only territories left for the white man, and the only show room on the globe fit for the white race.

To explore these countries of the south, Mr. Carpenter will set forth this fall upon an expedition during which he will traverse 25,000 miles. He will visit every large city in South America, and will write for The Journal upon all that he finds of importance.

NEW STORIES OF NEW COUNTRIES. His articles will be new and true, and will be written by the best known newspaper writer of the world.

Mr. Carpenter has traveled twice around the world. He has visited every large city of Europe, Asia, and of Africa, and he is known universally for his newspaper articles and his books upon travel.

But at no previous time has he found subjects of such timeliness and interest as the countries of South America.

As the Panama canal is opened, the canal South America will be opened to the world. It will be the frontier of the United States, one of the chief fields for the investment of American capital.

In the south particularly, the opening of the canal means the joining together of the two American continents in trade and fellowship. South America, to the south, is to become a near and an important neighbor.

Mr. Carpenter, in his articles, which are to be printed in The Journal each Sunday during next year, will explain the character of these new-found friends—their industries, their people, their old ways.

He will treat each subject with the skill which has made his articles of travel famous, and which will render the series a publication of interest to all.

At once informing and interesting.

RAGSDALE EXPECTED TO GIVE WAY TO NUTTING

Race for Mayor Pro Tem Will Be Between Aldermen Nutting and Harwell

Mutual friends of Aldermen J. R. Nutting and I. N. Ragdsdale are predicting that they will not oppose each other for the office of mayor pro tem. It has been known for several days that both of these aldermen as well as Alderman J. H. Harwell were applying to the place.

Alderman Ragdsdale will, it is believed, get out of the race in favor of his colleague from the sixth ward, the latter having as far back as last December been promised this support of several members of council.

The race, it is anticipated among city politicians, will be between Aldermen Nutting and Alderman Harwell. Neither of the three officials have as yet prepared a public statement concerning their intentions.

What Is Home Without an Appetite?
Many a Miserable Dyspeptic Can Quickly Enjoy a Good Appetite Using Sturtevant's Dyspeptic Tablets.

There is nothing so deplorable as a home where at every meal one member of the family sits in silence eating a special diet while others are partaking of the regular food.

Not only does this condition become almost unbearable to the dyspeptic, but it throws a shadow on the joyous spirit over the rest of the family.

The Child—Please eat some nice chicken, papa.
The Father—No, Buster, daddy don't feel like eating.

The presence of dyspepsia before the fact that a stomach sufferer cannot eat, makes his condition a serious one. It is actually doing himself an injury.

A Sturtevant's Dyspeptic Tablet taken after each meal will excite appetite and in a short time one will find a great deal of food becoming less of a burden.

Sturtevant's Dyspeptic Tablets are so evenly balanced that the system can manufacture its own supply and by its normal, healthy and vigorous appetite.

One of the real pleasures of eating is for smiling and smiling food. These qualities are essential to the normal digestion for they excite the flow of saliva in the mouth, and the gastric juices in the stomach, and follow ready the digestive apparatus for the food when it is eaten.

Sturtevant's Dyspeptic Tablets contain ingredients that every system needs. Weakness of fluids of nature used in digestion are quickly restored to their normal proportion, and the system is so evenly balanced that the system can manufacture its own supply and by its normal, healthy and vigorous appetite.

Prominent Atlanta Advertising Man Contributes to 'News-papperdom'

Julius B. Schloss, one of Atlanta's best known advertising men, has been again honored by "News-papperdom." A New York publication, which, in its issue of September 25, prints an article from his pen headed, "A National Advertising Campaign for a Clothing Manufacturer."

The article is, in substance, a letter recently written by Mr. Schloss to a firm of clothing manufacturers, "advertisers" recognized its value to the advertiser in general and secured the permission of the writer to publish it.

It is the first plan of Mr. Schloss in his career as a thoroughly competent advertising manager whose headquarters are at the home office of the manufacturer, and who will at once organize for the firm an "advertising machine." This manager must call on the customers in the large cities, and if the advertiser is not up to the standard, he must, in a diplomatic manner, show them how to improve.

Mr. Schloss stresses the value of newspaper advertising and declares it is this form that brings the most effective results. In completing the "machine," he suggests that the customer best the goods of the manufacturer in his newspaper ads and have the local ad writers correspond with and send written reports regularly to the advertising manager. It is in this manner he contemplates building up the "machine."

WOULD HELP MERCHANT. Mr. Schloss declares that this system would help the merchant to sell his goods as well as advertise the product of the maker. The firm, he says, by paying for a regular ad writer who has the merchant take care of the actual advertising space, settles the goods and there is mutual profit in the enterprise.

In conclusion Mr. Schloss says: "Your local newspaper advertising will eventually nationalize itself. To illustrate, I shall call it unit advertising. You can cover say, New England or part of the south or any other section—even the entire country—according to the extent that you aggregate the units."

"Here's what I mean: Atlanta is a unit. Richmond is a unit. Memphis is a unit. New Orleans is a unit. The newspapers of big cities circulate throughout their tributary territory. The Atlanta papers cover Georgia and also run into the Carolinas, Florida and Alabama. The Memphis daily papers have their territory also in the big cities, you also cover the states."

The dealers in the smaller towns read the big city papers and see that some good store in the big city is selling and featuring your clothing. That's a recommendation and many small town dealers will be likely, therefore, to buy your clothing too. And the small town consumer reads in the big city papers that your brand of clothes is sold at the big city store and if will have a tendency to influence him to patronize the dealer in his home town who also handles your clothing. But what's most important is that the consumer in the big city will eventually get a desire to wear your make of clothes—and will patronize the store where they are on sale."

Killed in Auto Race. THOMASVILLE, N. C., Oct. 4.—A. W. Hubbs, well known lumberman of this place, was killed here today when his automobile turned turtle, during an amateur race.

SCHMIDT WILL GO UNDER ALIENISTS' EXAMINATION

Sanity of Slayer-Priest Will Be Considered by Experts of New York

(By Associated Press.) NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—The authorities in charge of the prosecution of Hans Schmidt, the priest who dismembered the body of Anna Ammiller and threw the pieces into the Hudson river, announced tonight the next steps that are to be taken in the case following the eternal verdict of the coroner's jury yesterday that Schmidt was responsible for the woman's death.

On Tuesday Dr. A. R. Diefendorf, alienist of New Haven, Conn., will examine Schmidt and will make a report as to his sanity to the alienists who have already tested the priest's mind. On Wednesday the doctors will place their report in the hands of District Attorney Whitman.

ATLANTA OLD GUARD TO HONOR ALEX. H. STEPHENS

Younger Company Also Will Take Part in Ceremonies at Crawfordville

On Sunday morning, October 13, the Old Guard of the Gate City Guard, escorted by the younger company of the Gate City Guard, will leave in full regalia for Crawfordville, Ga., to dedicate the magnificent granite tablet which the Old Guard has provided to mark the grave of the late Alexander H. Stephens, vice president of the Confederacy.

The presentation and dedication of this monument will be one of the greatest and most lasting public services the Old Guard has performed. The grave of the famous Georgian, who also represented this state in the national hall of congress and resigned to become governor of the state, is in the cemetery at Crawfordville. For years the grave was unmarked, but later the Daughters of the Confederacy of this state, granite coping with an iron fence around the spot, and forty feet away there stands a stone figure of Mr. Stephens.

TO MEMORY OF FRIEND. The monument which the Old Guard will place above the grave is a massive double tablet of gray granite, the upper tablet to bear the following inscription, surrounded by the coat of arms of the Old Guard: "This tablet is a tribute from the Old Guard of the Gate City Guard to the memory of their departed friend, Alexander Hamilton Stephens, Statesman and Patriot, Vice President of the Confederate States of America. Born February Eleventh, 1812—Died March Fourth, 1885. Dedicated October Nineteenth, 1913."

STUDEBAKER OUTPUT FOR 1914 IS SOLD

Having sold in advance every car which its plants can build from now until September 1st, Sales Manager Benson of the Studebaker Corporation, announced tonight with the prediction that the coming season's business is destined to reach even greater dimensions than that of the fiscal year which has just closed. This statement is made despite the fact that now and throughout 1913 the Studebaker plants have worked without pause and much of the time with night shifts, vainly endeavoring to build as many cars as the Studebaker dealers were demanding to fill their uninterrupted flow of retail orders.

PANAMA ROCKS AGAIN IN GRIP OF EARTHQUAKE

Worst Horses for Army

(Special Cable to The Journal.) LONDON.—Although Mr. Tennant, under-secretary to the war office, has stated in the house of commons that the figures of the recent military census show an ample margin over and above the maximum requirements of horses for mounted troops further inquiry into Lord Fisher's alarming statement about our horse supply shows that the army authorities have played their last card, and lost.

SENATE RECOGNIZES WOMEN OF THE SOUTH

$400,000 Is Voted for a Home for the American Red Cross

BY WALTER SMITH.
WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—The services and sacrifice of the women of the United States, north and south, are to be commemorated by the erection in the city of Washington of a permanent home for the American Red Cross. The senate last night adopted a bill for the erection of a building on the site of the old arsenal, which is to be supplemented by $400,000 to be raised by public subscription.

The action of the senate, in which it is believed the house will follow, marked the legislative bridging of the bloody chasm between the north and south, and was the first time since the Civil war that the United States congress has acted on a measure of reconciliation on terms of equality with the north. The action was doubly significant in that it was unanimous. Not a vote was raised in protest when Senator Lee, of Virginia, offered the amendment with a favorable report from the library committee.

At the last session of congress, when the senate was controlled by the Republicans, Senator Lee introduced an amendment to the omnibus public building bill providing for the erection of a building of $400,000 to erect a suitable home for the American Red Cross. A memorial to the "Service and Sacrifice of the loyal women of the Civil war" was attached to the amendment. Although the amendment was defeated by a committee, it was not defeated by a vote. The amendment was generally protested vigorously against the discrimination against the southern women and gave notice that never would they permit such an appropriation to be made.

Senators Bacon, Hoke Smith, John Sharpe Williams, Lea and others joined in the attack upon the Red Cross proposition, and it was killed. At this session of congress, Senator Williams reintroduced the bill, but with only a slight change in verbiage, but important in its purpose. The Williams bill provided in plain terms that $400,000 should be appropriated by congress toward the erection of a permanent home for the service and sacrifice of the women of the United States, north and south, for the Civil war. This bill was reported favorably, and Senator Lea offered it a rider to the urgent deficiency bill.

Under these terms of amendment the appropriation of the $400,000 is contingent upon the raising of the balance by private subscription, which shall also be applied to the building.

FLORIDA WOMAN CHARGED TRYING TO KILL CHILD

Said to Have Taken Her Baby Into the Woods and Let Ants Crawl Upon It

PENSACOLA, Fla., Oct. 4.—Mrs. Daisy Holiday has been arrested at Roddick's Mill, Holmes county on a charge of assault with intent to murder her infant some time ago.

The woman is alleged to have left the infant in the woods where it was found the following day by farmers. The baby's body was covered with ants when found and was in a serious condition. The finders left the child with relatives of the woman, where it died three months later.

Following the death an investigation was started which resulted in the woman's arrest.

Without An Operation

How a New Jersey Man Got Rid of a Severe, Obstinate, Inguinal Hernia Without a Single Slight Trouble.

Below is a picture of Eugene M. Pullen, a well-known carpenter of New Jersey. He is shown in his work, particularly in his work, particularly in his work, particularly in his work.

At Last You Can Get Rid of Blood Trouble—D. S. S.

The word "Medicine" is one of the most abused in our language. There are certain medicinal properties just as necessary to health as the food we eat.

At an early age, Eugene Pullen was afflicted with a severe, obstinate, inguinal hernia. One day after delivery of a heavy trunk on an upper floor he had a pain in the right groin. The suffering was so severe that he was unable to move.

On Tuesday morning, October 7th, at 10 o'clock, there will be sold in Conyers, Ga., at public auction, in lump sum to highest bidder, approximately 195 bales of cotton damaged by fire and water.

The Real Estate Field

Corinthian Apartments and Several City and Suburban
Parcels Figure in $249,500 Exchange of Realty—Rock
Springs Road Acreage Brings $25,000—Houston Street
Lot Sold for $255 a Front Foot—Many Small Sales

One of the largest exchange transactions of the year, involving a West Peachtree street apartment house and several parcels of city and suburban property at an aggregate consideration of $249,500, was completed yesterday. The transaction was handled by the M. C. Kiser agency.

It involved the sale by J. F. Asker of Homanville to L. C. Durham, of Dawson, of the Corinthian apartments at No. 136 West Peachtree street, valued at $140,000.

This property is between Himmelfuth and Linden streets, and consists of a four-story brick apartment house on a lot fronting ninety-three feet on West Peachtree street with a depth of 130 feet.

The building contains twenty apartments, having an aggregate rental of approximately $10,000 a year.

Mr. Asker took as part payment other property valued in the aggregate at $150,000 as follows:

The northwest corner of Central avenue and Garnett street, which consists of three frame houses on a lot fronting ninety-four feet on Central avenue and 108 feet on Garnett street, valued at $15,000, or nearly $400 a front foot.

Two vacant lots on N. W. 10th street, one 100 feet front and 100 feet deep, and the other 100 feet front and 100 feet deep, valued at $15,000, or nearly $400 a front foot.

Another interesting announcement of yesterday was the sale of an acreage tract on the Rock Springs road for an aggregate consideration of $25,000.

This transaction was handled by the M. C. Kiser agency, and the property was sold to George M. Napier, who is the purchaser. The tract comprises the Ashley Park annex and overlooks the whole park from a fine elevation.

Mr. Napier will make a subdivision of fifty lots for Colonel Napier and put them on the market next spring. Mr. Napier has sold 250 lots of the Chattahoochee subdivision.

HOUSTON STREET SALE.
Collins Brothers and Davies have sold for W. R. Taylor & J. D. Butler, of Houston street, a six-room bungalow on lot 112, valued at $255 a front foot.

This lot is just east of Courtland street, having a frontage of fifty feet and a depth of 200 feet.

NOW IS GOOD TIME TO BEGIN SPRAYING TREES

Board of Entomology Tells How to Keep Down San Jose Scale

It is about spraying time with the orchard men of Georgia. Spraying has come to be about as important a feature of fruit growing as plowing is in farming.

The first spraying for San Jose scale is usually done from the first to the middle of November, and the second from January 1 to 15, or just before the trees begin to bud. In well-conducted orchards, where the scale has shown any sign of acquiring a foothold, two sprayings are made each season.

Though many cases of scale are sprayed only one time, usually just before the buds begin to appear on the trees, the double spraying, however, has been found both advantageous and profitable, says the state department of agriculture, and since the scale practically rids the orchard of the insect so far as any damage is concerned during the winter.

Ever since the scale was introduced into Georgia, probably by infested nursery stock from New Jersey, there has been a constant fight of the fruit growers to mitigate and lessen its damage to the orchards.

Though many cases of scale are sprayed only one time, usually just before the buds begin to appear on the trees, the double spraying, however, has been found both advantageous and profitable, says the state department of agriculture, and since the scale practically rids the orchard of the insect so far as any damage is concerned during the winter.

Ever since the scale was introduced into Georgia, probably by infested nursery stock from New Jersey, there has been a constant fight of the fruit growers to mitigate and lessen its damage to the orchards.

It is about spraying time with the orchard men of Georgia. Spraying has come to be about as important a feature of fruit growing as plowing is in farming.

The first spraying for San Jose scale is usually done from the first to the middle of November, and the second from January 1 to 15, or just before the trees begin to bud. In well-conducted orchards, where the scale has shown any sign of acquiring a foothold, two sprayings are made each season.

AT THE THEATRES

An Old Favorite, Al H. Wilson, Comes to the Atlanta in "A Rolling Stone" for One Night, Monday—"North of '53," the Frozen Arctic in Movies, at the Atlanta Latter Part of Week

Al H. Wilson, the German Chaucer, and the only present-day exponent of the kind of roles made dear to the theatergoer of a generation ago by Fritz Emmett, will be the strong attraction at the Atlanta Monday night.

Mr. Wilson will be seen in a new play written expressly for him by Herbert Hall V. below, author of "The Vinegar Toss" and other well known successes. "A Rolling Stone" is a comedy with music, which means, of course, that Mr. Wilson has written for his new play a plentiful number of the kind of German ballads he knows how to render so splendidly. Some idea of the character of these songs is conveyed by the following titles: "My Little Climbing Rose," "We Are as Far Apart as the World is Wide," "Lullaby in Germany" and "The Sea Saw Game of Life."

The play opens on the village green of a picturesque hamlet on the Hudson. In the distance is seen the stately mansion of the heroine, who is practically a prisoner in her own home, while her guardian and his estate conspire to retain control of her property by forcing her into a marriage with the young rake who has already squandered much of her money. But thanks to the arrival of a happy-go-lucky young German, the villain is foiled, the girl is freed from all her troubles and finds herself a real countess just before the ladies in the audience begin shutting out the final picture by getting on their hats.

"North of '53," the latest and most sensational of motion pictures, will be shown for the first time in this city at the Atlanta theater, October 3, 5, 10 and 11, with daily matinees. These pictures were taken by Mr. Beverly B. Dohls, of Nome, Alaska, and are being presented by Mr. Joseph F. Richardson, Jr., the man who so successfully presented the Italian African hunt pictures.

"North of '53" covers a scope of country of which few people are familiar. In Mr. Dohls' pictures are shown the far northern land of grandeur in summer and of ice and wonderment in winter, which lies at the upper end of the continent north of latitude 53. Every detail of the energies of the white people is shown, among which is the Copper River and Northwestern railroad, which is considered one of the greatest achievements accomplished by man.

Another feature was the wonderful endurance shown by the hardy little Alaskan dogs, which were used a great deal to draw the sledges containing material used in constructing bridges.

"The Messenger Boy," Bijou Stock Offering This Week.

The popularity of the Jewell Kelley company is being demonstrated in a most satisfactory manner these days at the Bijou, where crowded houses are being nightly. The sixth week, which was brought to a close Saturday night, was one of the most successful of the stock season.

The seventh week will be started Monday afternoon with a new play entitled "The Messenger Boy," featuring Eddie Black, Earl Hagley and Rose Morris as the three little outcasts. "The Messenger Boy" tells a story of incidents in the life of a newsboy in a large city and touches a moral lesson. It is a clean, wholesome play with lots of good, strong dramatic climax, and will doubtless prove one of the most delightful plays of the stock season.

At the opening of the play, Grit and

Big New York Success, "A Son of Solomon," Headlines Forsyth-Sequel to "Three Weeks" Comes to Lyric in Elinor Glyn's Dramatized Novel, "One Day" - Bijou Shows "The Messenger Boy"

Some of the best known acts in vaudeville have been selected for a program that will be offered at the Forsyth this week. In the entire program there is not an act that has failed to attract the foot-crowded by Keith managers before a number can be presented in one of the exclusive houses of the circuit.

The headliner will be a dramatic comedy sketch, "A Son of Solomon," which is coded to be the greatest play that has ever been offered in vaudeville. It will be presented by a thoroughly capable company, with special effects, and will be something entirely away from the usual run of vaudeville. The story is of intense gripping interest and the comedy that will awake the humor in most any soul. Another feature of one that will be a splendid drawing card will be James Thornton, one of the greatest comedians the world has ever known, and comedy to be the best. Thornton has been copied more than any individual in the theatrical profession, and has furnished stories for a small army of the present-day tale-bearers in vaudeville.

A remarkable and original gymnastic acrobatic offering will be the presentation of the Carl Danneberg troupe of daring people. This act is one of the most interesting of its sort that has been presented on any stage.

Their new comedy, "Rise-Me," presents one of the real comedy treats of the season. Eddie Bowden and Jim Shannon will offer "bits of vaudeville" and the five Melody Boys will make music that will make applause.

The special feature will be the appearance of Henrietta Wilson, the famous character, who will give an exhibition of wonderful skill with the revolver and rifle.

Elinor Glyn's Book, "One Day," at Lyric.

One of the season's important productions, a play which has caused widespread attention, will be presented here for the first time at the Lyric Monday evening, when Miss Cecil Spooner's brilliant dramatization of "One Day," Elinor Glyn's novel, will be disclosed to our theatergoers.

The principal theme of the play is the life of a young girl who is born in New York "One Day," created a veritable whirl of interest and excitement. The play is in four acts and is full of interesting and entertaining dialogue, smart situations and picturesque romance. One of the principal scenes takes place aboard an ocean liner on the high seas, returning to New York from Liverpool. It is on this liner that Paul, the young prince of Sarkis, first sees and falls madly in love with "One Day," a young western girl who is returning to the states. The infatuation is mutual and for the short space of one day they find their mad love lead them to the altar.

Miss Faye Cusick, a young actress of note, will be seen in the role of Paul, the beautiful young heiress, while Mr. Victor Southland, a young and handsome player who has achieved success in his own chosen profession, will play the part of Paul.

Studebaker Wins Cup

A Studebaker "27" headliner won the trophy in the recent Seattle Reliability run, with a perfect score and without adjustment or repair in the 300 miles of rough going. The field of contestants included twenty-three other cars.

COLLECTOR OF STAMPS BACK IN CITY AGAIN

William F. Cornell Returns to Atlanta for Two Days, Sunday and Monday

William F. Cornell, the noted collector of Confederate postage stamps, bills and manuscripts, is again in the city, stopping Sunday and Monday at the Majestic hotel.

He has just returned from New Orleans, where he secured many rare manuscripts, letters, provisional stamps and bills. He states he has been deluged with letters offering him 50-cent Confederate paper money, when the silver 50-cent piece is wanted.

The paper 50-cent piece is very common.

COUNCIL WILL DECLARE CHARTER RESULT MONDAY

Results of the recent charter election will be officially declared by the general council at its meeting Monday afternoon. The revised charter adopted and advocated by the council was defeated, but two charter amendments submitted by the legislature to the voters as separate and independent propositions were accepted. These were the adoption into the charter of the initiative, referendum and recall, and the reduction of the powers of the city recorder.

RACING KING TO USE TIRE CHAINS

Something altogether new in equipping a car for racing is to put tire chains on it. Louis Diabrow is to put them on the Jay-Eye-See and the Simpson 24s. He says he thinks he can make better time on turns with the Wood chains he will mount.

The Case company, of whose racing team Diabrow is the head, will equip all its 1914 cars with Wood chains.

William B. Thomas Dead

The funeral of William B. Thomas, seventy-five years old, who died at his home on the Jay-Eye-See and the Simpson 24s, will be held on Friday night, at 11 o'clock, at the West End Baptist church. Rev. J. F. Purser officiating. The interment will be in Decker. Mr. Thomas is survived by his wife and one sister, Mrs. Ella Thomas.

The initial concert to be given by the Philharmonic orchestra at the Atlanta theaters will be the first of the season and will be largely attended by the music loving public. The hour has been set for 4:30 and will be the first concert given since the raising of the popular guarantee fund.

To Mrs. Brooks
Mrs. A. J. Sharp entertained the G. L. club Thursday at luncheon in compliment to Mrs. Catharine Brooks, who has recently returned from Birmingham. In the contest Mrs. U. R. McCallum won the first prize, a silver vanity box. Mrs. William Van Houten won the second prize, a book of poems.

Girlish, Wrinkle-Free Skin Easy to Have
(From Pilem Magazine.)
Since its remarkable astringent and tonic properties became known, clever women all over the world have been using the sassafras face ball to "tone up" their faces, remove wrinkles and draw flabby cheeks and neck back to normal. After using the solution, the face immediately feels much firmer. The skin tightens evenly all over the face, fine redness lines and sagging. The formula is: Powdered sassafras, 1 oz., dissolved in witch hazel, 1-2 pint. Another wonderful facial beautifier and rejuvenator that has become quite a rage in the United States, as in Europe, is macerated wax. Druggists report a great demand. The wax literally absorbs a shallow, blotchy or withered complexion, giving the fresh, vigorous, healthy-hued young skin underneath a chance to "breathe" and to show itself. Applying the wax at night, like cold cream, washing it off morning, will completely renovate a poor complexion in a week or ten days. One ounce usually is sufficient.—(ADV.)

SIGNS OF THE TIMES

ADDED to the list of prospective brides is Miss Annie Lee McKenzie, whose engagement to Mr. Milton Dargan, Jr., is one of the most interesting announcements of today.

Since her debut the pretty bride-elect has enjoyed a delightful popularity not only by her lovely face, but a cordial charm and sweetness of manner that is inherent and has made her generally beloved. She is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. M. McKenzie and has all the advantages which wealth and social prominence carry with them.

After her school days north, Miss McKenzie spent some time abroad and is a member of the lovely group of young women of the Debutante club and who will be brides of this fall, Miss Sarah Rawson and Miss Laura Ansley, others among the number.

Mr. Dargan is the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Dargan. He is a graduate of the University of Georgia, a popular member of the social clubs and is one of the best known of the younger insurance men.

WITH the beginning of October and the return of the social set from mountain and shore, rumors are current of many brilliant entertainments to be given in compliment to the debutantes of this season.

A group of lovely young girls will be formally introduced to society and the series of parties to be tendered them will make the winter season unusually gay. Miss Margaret Grant will be one of the first of the debutantes to be presented, the tea at which Mrs. John W. Grant to entertain in her honor to be given the latter part of this month and to be followed by a series of dancing parties which will be given at home.

Miss Jeannette Lowndes and Mrs. Holland Lowndes will be the guests of honor at a buffet luncheon to be given by Mrs. George S. Lowndes, Sr., and Mrs. George S. Lowndes, Jr., at their home in Andy Park on the morning of October 22.

Only a few of the dates for the large receptions have been set. Mr. and Mrs. William D. Ellis, Jr., will introduce Miss Adgate Ellis at a large afternoon tea on the afternoon of November 4, the guests to include the married friends of the hostess, the tea to be followed in the evening by a large dance at the Piedmont club at which Mr. and Mrs. Ellis will entertain the young set.

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin P. Ansley have dated the dancing party at which they will entertain for Miss Mamie Ansley for the evening of November 6, and Mr. and Mrs. D. N. McCullough will introduce Miss Helen McCullough at a large reception to be given early in November.

A pretty member of the season's debutante set will be Miss Evelyn Greene. Miss Greene is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William D. Greene and a niece of Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Adair. Dark haired with lovely brown eyes and a slender graceful figure, she is particularly attractive. Miss Greene has been a charming figure in the affairs which have made up the summer galas and while she will make no formal debut she will take a delightful part in the festivities of the winter season.

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 5, 1913.

Under Mercury's sway
Lucky is this day.
Mercury rules with power today, renewing the advance influence of Saturn and Uranus, which are in unfriendly aspect in the morning.
It is a time favorable for travel, short journeys are under a lucky rule and should lead to happy reunions with friends.
The time is an auspicious one for renewing old acquaintances and making new ones. The planetary influences are held to turn the mind into optimistic channels and to emphasize the power of personality.

As the receptivity of the intellect is awakened while this aspect prevails it is a favorable day for preachers, lecturers and reformers.

Students and writers are under a particularly stimulating government. It is foretold that the trend of thought will be away from materialistic channels and toward poetic and romantic subjects.

There is a sign read as remarkably fortunate for young men. Both girls and boys should benefit by the astral conditions.

It is predicted that there will be many marriages among persons of prominence in this country and Europe, the number far exceeding the need for previous autumn and winter. One alliance will unite an American girl with a prince, the other a princess.

Education is under a government of the stars which indicates sensational revelations. Exposures of bad methods and unwise use of funds will be made in several cities.

Uranus is in a place indicative of enslaving enterprises. Heavy money loans to investors in small ventures are foretold. Women will be victims in business schemes connected with domestic industries, those who read the stars declare.

Large amounts of money will be stolen.
There is a sign which warns banks and places of business against robbery;
the result of international conflict among expert thieves of two continents. Chicago will suffer greatly, especially during the holiday season.
Persons whose birthdate it is should guard against illness. They may meet disappointments and suffer losses. Many will travel and change their base of business operations. They are admonished to move with extreme care.

Children born on this day will be alert and bright in mind. They may prosper as artistic persons. Love of justice should be a characteristic. They are subjects of labor and usually marry when they are young.

paper Syndicate.)

The Most Convenient Trunk
In the World

—Is a Rountree Wardrobe Trunk. It stands on end and is really a portable wardrobe.
You hang clothes in it and they are in as perfect a condition at the end of your trip as they were when packed.

One side of this trunk contains a full set of garment hangers attached to a special carrier which slides easily in and out.
The last skirt or suit is as easily reached as the first. On the opposite side are a number of drawers of various sizes, for waists, shoes, ties, stockings, etc.

Every inch of this trunk is made of fine materials by skilled workmen in our factory. It's a trunk built to be hinged about; built to take all the punishment that baggage "smashers" can inflict with helpless luggage.

If you would take a goodly assortment of waists, skirts, suits, etc., with you and keep them in good condition, readily accessible at all times, you will do well to invest in a Rountree Wardrobe Trunk. Any one that you select will serve you satisfactorily for many years.

Just Arrived
A New Shipment of Patent Leather and Gun Metal Cuban French Heel Boots and Colonials

We are just in receipt of a new shipment of the popular Spanish and Cuban French Heel Shoes. The low shoes come with cut steel buckles or covered slides. The boots are made with both cloth and dull kid tops.

It is hardly necessary to say that these will find ready sale as no manufacturer in the country is anywhere near up with his orders on footwear made with this new type of heel.

We foresaw, in a measure, the tremendous popularity which they would enjoy.

This order was placed the latter part of July and promised for September 15th delivery, but are just being received.

Don't delay making your selection a single hour if you desire a pair of these new style shoes. The size range will be complete only for a few days.

FEATURES OF PAST BATTLES FOR THE WORLD'S HONORS

The largest attendance at any one game was 38,281, when the Athletics opened at the Polo grounds October 14th, 1911, Mathewson winning from Bender 2-1; the smallest attendance, last game of 1908 series, played at Detroit October 14, 6,210.

The fastest game was played at Detroit October 14, 1908, Mordecai Brown winning from Donovan 2-0 in one hour and twenty-five minutes.

The slowest game was played by the White Sox at Cuba, October 12, 1906, at West Side park. Required two hours and forty minutes for Walsh and White to win by a 4-0 lead from Reulbach, Froister and Overall in nine innings.

The 3-5 tie game of the 1907 series between Detroit and Chicago was played in 2:40, but this game went twelve innings.

No series has opened as early as the Boston-Pittsburgh series of 1902, which started on the first of October. The latest game ever played was between the Giants and Athletics, played October 26, 1911, at New York, and weather delaying the series.

There have been ten games where the attendance was less than the crowd at the Atlanta-Mobile game of September 5, 1912, Detroit falling under this mark five times, Boston three times, and Pittsburgh and Philadelphia once each. The opening game of the 1908 series was played before 10,512 people at Detroit, 1,358 less than the Atlanta crowd of September 5.

George Hobe's three-base hits won the 1906 championship for the White Sox, and Frank Baker's home run did the same in 1911 for the Athletics.

YOUNG CUBAN, SICK HERE, LONGS FOR HOME

Georgia Libby Circle of King's Daughters Seeks Funds to Send Him to Cuba

Contributions are asked by the Georgia Libby Circle of the King's Daughters for a fund to defray the expense of sending Gabriel Guizarro, a Cuban, home to his mother in Cuba. The young man has been a charge of this organization for over a year, and is presently ill with diabetes.

Guizarro, who is just twenty-three years old, is a graduate of Emory college. He received his education there through the generosity of a friend of the organization. After finishing college, he secured a position in the clerical department of the Western and Atlantic railroad company, where he held until illness forced him to quit work.

His case was reported to the ladies of the Georgia Libby Circle, of the King's Daughters, and for eight months they have been working for him at the Grady hospital. To defray this expense they held rummage sales, donations for which came from the merchants in the city, and for which ladies are most grateful. In addition the young men at the railroad company contributed out of their salaries to help the Cuban receive the necessary medical aid, and Dr. Sumner at the Grady hospital has done all he could for the young man.

As Guizarro's case was pronounced incurable, the King's Daughters were compelled to move him from the Grady hospital. A room was found for him at 507 Capitol avenue, and there he is given every attention. All of this he can not afford to bear and at the time time keep up their other work in the city. For this reason they ask help from any one who would like to assist in sending the Cuban home.

Through Senator Hoke Smith the matter was reported to the Cuban legation in Washington, and the Cuban legation has sent his personal check for $10 to the fund.

Contributions may be sent either to the treasurer, Mrs. W. O. Ballard, 406 North Pryor street, or to Mrs. C. F. Jones, leader of the Georgia Libby Circle of the King's Daughters, 1009 DeKalb avenue. Mrs. Jones's telephone number is 1514. Should any one desire further information as to the condition of the young man.

Tumulty in Rubber Neck Car Heard His Own Virtues Lauded

(By Associated Press.)
WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—Secretary Tumulty was chuckling today over his experience in a sightseeing automobile.

He had been engaged to take a party of President Wilson when the latter was in the city yesterday. The party was made up of the president's family, the president's secretary, and a number of other officials.

Secretary Tumulty blushed uneasily when the guide, a young man named Tumulty, began to laud his own virtues. The young man was a good looking and rare specimen.

Going By Herself on 2000 Mile Horseback Ride

Miss Betty Thorpe and the horse she will ride in 2000 mile vacation jaunt.

BY BETTY THORPE.
SPOKANE, Wash.—Two thousand miles horseback.

Yes, that's some trip for a girl, especially when a large part of the journey is through wild and unsettled sections of the country.

I expect to ride from Spokane to Chicago. I expect to reach Chicago in about two months.

I realize that this is "some ride" for a girl, but still it is not impossible. It has not been attempted, that I know of, since the days of the pioneers, and if they could do it, why not I? All I need is courage and the determination to get there. I have both.

My reason for the trip? I have always wanted to do it because I think it a delightful and adventurous way of seeing the country—the

GOTHAM GUN-MAN SAID TO BE GIRL'S SLAYER

Tiny Maiden of New York Killed, and Police Are on Gun-Man's Trail

(By Associated Press.)
NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—The battered body of a little girl—killed by a blow on the head—lay in the Harlem morgue today while the police of the greater city sought Joseph the Puma, a notorious Italian gunman, as her slayer.

The child's body was brought to the morgue last night by an undertaker, who told a tale of having been coerced at pistol's point to go to the gunman's flat and remove the body. In the flat he saw a blond woman weeping. When detectives reached the apartment later she was gone and with her the gunman.

The theory was advanced that the child had been kidnapped and was being held for ransom. There is no police record, however, of a child of that description being missing.

The undertaker—Ralph Pansu—was held today pending further investigation. He says the gunman told him that he had hit the child as she begged for water at night.

The undertaker—Ralph Pansu—was held today pending further investigation. He says the gunman told him that he had hit the child as she begged for water at night.

The theory was advanced that the child had been kidnapped and was being held for ransom. There is no police record, however, of a child of that description being missing.

had it out Thursday and Peacock won by the score of 18 to 12. The game was fiercely fought all the while, but no spectacular plays were pulled off. Coach Wood of B. H. S. refereed and gave the utmost satisfaction to all. A fairly large sized crowd was out and there was some determined rooting for both teams.

When the students of Tech III assembled at the beginning of the present school year one of the first changes which caught the eyes of the "old boys" was the appearance of the shop windows. The view from the wood and machine shops is, or rather was, ex-

Basketball practice has been begun at Peacock by a few men who do not play football. They have been practicing every afternoon and the outlook for Peacock's football team is bright. A strong team in the Prep league and will not be very far behind the leaders. Peacock wishes to arrange games with the teams around the city and these teams are requested to call on George Conklin at IV 2116 as soon as possible. ARTHUR PEW, JR.

We would like to have a team picked from the boys of the sixth grade. We would like to get some games with teams in our class. Please write Mr. Cook, I. 536 if games are wanted.

The boys of the debating society are wanted to give a debate on the summer the dead was done. 'Twas a noble act, but we fear not appreciated. We would like to have a fine one of itself into the domain of the dead. Their windows have been given a coat of paint so thick that an X-ray would not be able to see through.

The medal that Tenth grade teacher offers to the child who makes the highest average during each month was won by Hattie Miller, her average being 57.7. Hattie Miller, Sue White, Frances Graham, Leslie Lewis, Eugenia Clark, Rine Mills, Maggie Buchanan and Mary Shuey are the children on the roll of honor this month. Every one of them made above 95.

The seventh and eighth grade boys and girls are to have elocution Friday afternoon for a medal. Each of us knows that a medal will be ours each month, because we know none of the others can surpass us in speaking.

The girls are succeeding very well in playing captain ball. Team No. 2, or the Purples, have not lost but two games since we started playing. The boys have lost all interest in playing

ON THE FIRING LINE WITH THE COMMERCIAL TRAVELERS

Cliff Johnson and Russ Bates, travelers for the J. K. Orr Shoe Co., have some pretty sales scores for the week. Each sold approximately $7,000 worth of shoes, which amounts to a day's sale, including Saturday and Sunday.

W. J. Richmond, representative of the Glasgow Manufacturing company, of New York, is in Atlanta making sales calls to the dealers here. Mr. Richmond was formerly a resident of Atlanta and is still a great booster for this city. He says that he is unable to see that New York has anything on Atlanta.

Colonel Lockwell Johnson, of the J. K. Orr shoe company, was busy Friday morning looking after a shipment of shoes. He is one of the largest merchants in the north Georgia. He is a native of Georgia and has been in the shoe business for many years. He is now in Atlanta on a business trip.

"All our salesmen are out on the road this week," said E. Robinson, of the A. M. Robinson company. "They are all out on the road, and the country is tickled to death with the new high price for shoes. The new shoes are in great demand."

Sam Dodson, the Texas traveler for the J. K. Orr shoe company, who started on the road for his company's new week ago, is turning in a fine record of business.

R. A. Sewall, traveler for John Silver & Co., will be on the road for his company's new week. He is now in Atlanta on a business trip. He is a native of Georgia and has been in the shoe business for many years.

ANDREWS WILL PRESENT DENVER PLAN POST B

Denver T. P. A.'s Provide Benefit in Case of Death From Natural Causes

Editor Firing Line: Mr. attention has been called to a side line operated by the Denver, Col. post, which is substantially as follows:

The post being already organized with substantial business men representing its membership, they have organized themselves into a mutual co-operative society, each member pledging himself to pay $1.00 into the treasury and at the death of any member from other causes than accident, his family immediately receives a check amounting to $1,000.

I am calling attention to this because it seems to me that with our post already organized with the character of men composing its roster, that this should appeal to every member. I am calling attention to this because it seems to me that with our post already organized with the character of men composing its roster, that this should appeal to every member.

Mr. J. K. Orr, of the Orr Shoe company, spent several days with Walter Brown at Birmingham, Ala., last week. Mr. Brown is the Red Seal representative in that city.

The McCord-Stewart company received shipments of new dried fruits and beans from the west last week. The coffee and candy plant of this company is running at full capacity in these days of brisk trade.

C. F. Holt, of the Dixie Pickle and Preserving company, states that his company has just completed the biggest month's business in its history.

"All our salesmen are out this week," said J. H. Little of the Dougherty-Little-Rodney company. "Business is good on the road for any of them to take time to come into headquarters."

The R. J. Reynolds Tobacco company, of Winston-Salem, N. C., which heretofore has been confining its products to pipe and smoking tobacco, has recently put a new cigarette on the market, known as the "Reynolds," which retails for 5 cents.

The Capital City Tobacco company is introducing a new cigarette to the trade in this territory.

Air Travel, of the Ward-Truitt company, is in north Georgia on a trip for his health. Mr. Truitt's sales during his recent trips proved so large that he concluded he deserved a vacation.

W. A. Gossett, of the Liquid Carbonic company, who has been ill several weeks following an operation, is now convalescing.

J. A. Wilson, of the John Deere Plow company, was in the city last week. Mr. Wilson's sales during his recent trips proved so large that he concluded he deserved a vacation.

Walter Sloan, who left last Tuesday on his first trip for the Ward-Truitt company, has been "burning up" the road for his company's new week.

So large has been the volume of business pouring in upon the Vollmer Manufacturing company, that an additional man has been added to the working force. This company reports increasing business from all over the south.

All the salesmen of the Hargrave Oil company are out on the road and are greasing the business wheels to a fine tune. Mr. Hargrave, president of the company, reports fine collections, which, he says, will continue to get better throughout October.

M. Kleinberg, southwest Georgia traveler for the Ward-Truitt company, was in last week for the holidays incident to the Jewish New Year.

C. E. Woodall, of the Ward-Truitt company, will spend Sunday with his family at LaGrange, Ga. He has been over in the Alabama territory and secured some good business over there.

C. E. Parsons, traveler for the E. L. Adams company, has recently taken on some new territory in the section around Carrollton, Ga.

Mr. P. S. Brownlee, who underwent an operation several weeks ago, is convalescing and was moved Saturday from his home in Kennesaw, Ga. He is the wife of P. S. Brownlee, the well known traveler of the E. L. Adams company.

E. L. Adams, of the E. L. Adams company, will spend Sunday with his parents at Jackson, Ga.

The "line" at Sam & Stamps Saturday was W. T. Duncan, J. C. Owens and W. Y. Henry.

In from the road at the Brown, Perryman & Greene Co. Saturday were A. M. Greene, J. O. Chambers and J. F. Tate. All had a good week's business.

Tom Cluyt, city salesman of Pat & Stamps, was a member of a party of sixteen young ladies and gentlemen who enjoyed a "pumpkin hunt" in the woods near Atlanta Friday night. Three "pumpkins" were bagged. L. L. Marbut, member of the party, had the thrilling adventure of falling in a dry well, but was quickly rescued.

E. G. Thomas, of the Rice & Hutchins Atlanta company, spent last week at Cleveland, Ohio, in attendance upon the western meeting of the Rice & Hutchins managers. The meeting was in the nature of a final conference on styles for the spring.

T. J. Monroe, of the Consolidated Paper company, was in New York last week on a buying trip. The company reports September as its banner month, and it has been in business for many years.

Here's to the Dealer--- May He Deal Fair!

Last Sunday a New York department store advertised a big anniversary sale to begin Monday. It was O'Neill-Adams Co.

Monday they sold upward of THREE HUNDRED AND THIRTY-TWO THOUSAND DOLLARS' worth of merchandise—a record!

In Tuesday's Times the firm arose and in about thirty inches of well-chosen space said its very best THANK YOU.

They said Thank You not only to the people who had bought the goods, to the clerks and helpers who had done the work, but also—

They said Thank You to the MANUFACTURERS who had supplied the merchandise—the MANUFACTURERS who had stood close by, right back to them, replenishing the stocks as the steady onslaught of buying swept them away.

You don't see that every day. The MANUFACTURER isn't looking for bouquets. He's after business. But when business comes by the way of bouquets, he smiles and likes it.

It was a graceful and sensible thing of O'Neill-Adams Co. to make their manners to the manufacturer. It was a recognition of the importance of his relation to the great game of Supply and Demand.

The MANUFACTURER is the man behind the scenes who makes possible the brilliant action out in front.

If he is CLOSE BY, where you can put your hands on what you need from him, the game goes gloriously. If he is remote, the play is handicapped and profits are clipped.

When you get this far in reading this bulletin, you will please kindly go right to the bottom thereof, and read the names of those of us who sign it? Then come back and read on.

We are ATLANTA MANUFACTURERS. We want to talk about ten minutes' worth to you SOUTHERN DEALERS.

A few months ago the Atlanta Merchants and Manufacturers Association flooded the merchants of the South with a pamphlet.

The first paragraph of it ran like this—read it, it only looks like poetry; it's really common horse-sense:

If you keep a store in Hometown, And you stock it up with stuff Bought in far and distant places, Just the local trade to bluff; If you skip the near-by market, And you travel far to buy, Is it fair to scold the natives If the same plan they should try?

Then there was another paragraph that went along, about like this:

If you pay out extra dollars For big freights and travel, too; If you spend your local money In a section far from you; If you boost the far-off market By bestowing there your trade, Can you kick when local patrons Follow out the plan you've laid?

Here, Brother Dealer, is where we get right down to brass tacks. There has never been so much sentiment as there is this good Sunday for ATLANTA-MADE stuff. The movement to popularize Atlanta products is more than a sentiment—it is an ACTUAL FACT.

The women folks are talking it. The schools are touching on it incidentally and the children are absorbing the idea.

The consumer is getting hold of the idea, that his loyalty is involved—which it certainly is. The spirit of the sentiment is crystallizing into a growing demand for ATLANTA-MADE wares.

The question is, will YOU DEALERS see in time the advantage that awaits you if you handle OUR products?

We are proposing to carry on a campaign of education, not only to the present crop of consumers, but to the coming-ones. We will stand right back of you in every effort to swell the demand for our product. We can demonstrate to you beyond the shadow of a doubt that we have the STUFF. We have made good all over the South and in many other sections of the country.

We can do it in a bigger way than ever—WITH YOUR HELP. Tell you what: We can't go into all the details of what we, as individual firms, want you to know about our particular line—our Shoes, our Shirts, our Vehicles, our Bread, our Farm Tools, our Mattresses, our Stoves, our Stock Feed—

But you study about what we've said, and let's get together on the supply-and-demand proposition. Write us. Phone us. Come by the office. Let's make it a mutual-benefit plan. What do you say?

TRIP THROUGH DIXIE PLANT IS INTERESTING

Dixie Pickle and Preserving Company Enlarging Factory. Doing Big Business

Enlarging their plant and also taking care of an ever increasing volume of trade has kept things on the jump at the Dixie Pickle and Preserving company for the last several months. A visit to the plant by a Firing Line representative last week disclosed it to be a scene of bustling activity. Canned pickles, of which the company has been bottling and packing since 1888, were being bottled and packed, while the new plant was being worked on. The new plant is a two-story building and the carpenters were busy on the new building which are being added.

B. Hancock, president of the company, conducted the Firing Line representative through the big factory. The first floor was piled high with crates of pickles, and the second floor was a scene of bustling activity. The company started making vinegar eight years ago when the company was a small one. In this portion of the plant the pickles are placed in the various sized jars, and the vinegar is poured over them. The pickles are then sealed in their jars and the vinegar is then poured over them. The pickles are then sealed in their jars and the vinegar is then poured over them.

The improvements in the plant which the company has yet to make are an addition from the railroad track to the basement, a passageway from the old portion of the plant to the basement of the new and the completion of the company's work shop and a rearrangement of storage of raw material.

Dealer Says Improved Demand Is Sure Sign of Improved Business

"Big sales of office furniture are the best barometer of business to be had," said John C. Chandler, of the H. C. Chandler company, office equipment dealer. "When the business is investing in better office equipment you can safely say the business is growing. We have been agreeably surprised at the many calls we have had during the past week from out-of-town parties for catalogues of office furniture, and our sales in and around Atlanta point to a larger business in this line during the fall. We are loading our floors with the latest patterns on wood and steel desks to be heavy during the entire fall and winter.

"The amount of new equipment being put out I feel sure is a fair degree to the improved conditions of the last thirty days."

ATWOOD REPLIES TO "MOUNTAIN DEW" STORY
Editor Firing Line: The following item recently appeared in the Firing Line to which I take the liberty of making some observations.

"J. L. Atwood, north Georgia traveler for the McCord-Stewart company, showed up with unusually fine business last week. Whether it was due to the general rising tide of prosperity, is not known at headquarters, so they say. The fellow at the house that said it was the 'mountain dew' was a mistake. The cause for the trade everywhere, and at all times, is looking for the price, as McCord-Stewart company have them for everybody. The class of goods which they carry are the best to be had. Second, our terms suit everybody. (Cash). Third and last, we are known as the most reliable house in the State City."

Now you see why my business is good, and my day week will continue to grow in just as long as I work sixteen hours a day six days a week.

Yours truly,
J. L. ATWOOD.

Jack W. Evans, of the Atlanta Agricultural works, has attained much fame as a writer from his articles that have been appearing in the Firing Line. Mr. Evans' article on the advantages of Atlanta as a wholesale market was widely copied. The Hardware Dealers' Magazine of New York, one of the foremost trade papers in the United States, devoted much space to it, giving credit to the Atlanta Journal Firing Line.

FAUST FACTORY SWAMPED WITH SPAGHETTI ORDERS

Editor Firing Line:
Several days ago I started on a trip in my territory. When I walked into a jobber's house one of the first questions was "Why don't I get some Faust spaghetti?" The retailers are saying I must have my order of Faust spaghetti some time since. Now I must get me at least part of my order at decided to go to St. Louis and see if I could not help my good friends out.

At the factory I find them swamped with orders and away behind on shipments. I also find not only letters but telegrams urging shipment.

This is evidence that the trade appreciates a high class article. And also goes to show the trend of all business through the south.

I also found other manufacturers like my people behind on shipments. We are asking our friends to have a little patience, as we are doing our best for them.

With orders now on hand it will be some time before we can catch up, and continue to come.

Yours very truly,
B. R. JONES,

TRAVELER FAVORS GRAHAM AND WHOLE WHEAT BREAD

Editor Firing Line:
The Acworth hotel has inaugurated quite a trend to their bill of fare in the way of breads and cakes. Whole wheat bread, and thinking all the breads are very delicious these breads are very popular. The whole wheat will follow their example.

There's no question but that much dyspepsia and discomfort would disappear from among the traveling public if all hotels would adopt the use of Graham and whole wheat bread.

WRITES OF SUITCASES EXCHANGED BY MISTAKE

Editor Firing Line:
I have in my possession a suit case containing the business card building plans, wanted by the Bill of one of Samuel W. Hemphill, southern sales manager for the F. C. Lamp company, of New York, and thinking all the breads are very delicious these breads are very popular. The whole wheat will follow their example.

J. C. Mason, of Cuthbert, traveler for the Consolidated Paper company, was a visitor at headquarters Saturday, the first time in several weeks. He comes with reports of booming times in south Georgia, and declares that if it had not been for the lame foot with which he is suffering he doesn't know how much goods he would have sold this month. As it was, his orders went up into big figures.

The travelers at headquarters Saturday at the Hagan-Malone company were W. W. Smith from southern Georgia, R. G. Jones, from north Georgia, and Doyline Pennington, Mr. Pennington was reviewing his line of samples and will return to the road Monday. All the travelers brought in good orders as well as good collections.

Among the activities of the E. L. Adams company last week were shipments of big quantities of Robin Hood shells and the New York state factory canned goods of the Edgett-Burnham company. During September the Adams company did the biggest month's business in its history.

"September showed the biggest month's business in all our history," Hagan-Malone company. "August is usually our largest shipping month, but September ran far ahead of it. Our shipping force is working night and day, and indications are that there will be no let up in the rush of trade throughout the fall."

The four new wagons of the Atlanta Hadding company began operations October 1, selling Buster Brown and Milkmaid brand.

The Montgomery company is already planning to start in Georgia for the Christmas season of 1914. This company always keeps a lookout for business ahead.

Hal Rivers, of the McCord-Stewart company, specializing last week in sales of Atlanta-made goods. He has made it a rule to begin every order with an item from some Farm Bell goods which his company manufactures, and he has been uniformly successful in carrying out his plan.

H. J. Atwood, since that mountain dew story about him in the Firing Line is now afraid to take even a glass of lemonade. At least that's what he reports at the office. Mr. Atwood is a traveler for the McCord-Stewart company.

A. J. Edmondson, representative of Hona cocoa, has returned to Atlanta, after being away since July 30. He spent his vacation in New York city, and has recently been on a sales trip at Augusta, Savannah and on both the coast and west coasts of Florida. His company will soon send a crew of women demonstrators to the south. They will begin their work at Savannah on October 15.

W. M. Whitley, special representative of the Havana-American company has just returned from an extended trip to Texas. He reports Georgia in much better shape than Texas, so far as crops are concerned.

W. R. Carlton, of the Capitol City Tobacco company, has returned from Birmingham, where he went to the Rotary club of Atlanta, and was entertained by the Rotary club of Birmingham. He declared he had the time of his life.

The Peter Hill company of Atlanta, manufacturers of men's athletic underwear, have just issued a beautiful catalogue showing their various productions. It is profusely illustrated with wash drawings and is printed in colors.

Fund Will Be Received for Decatur Orphans' Home. McCalla Makes Appeal

W. E. McCalla, the fertilizer material man, who has been on the road for years, and is so well known as commercial traveler and Gideon, is also treasurer of the Decatur Orphans' Home at Decatur, Ga., and he expects his friends on the road and over the state to remember orphans' work and rally day, October 11 and 12, and send him a check for one or more days' salary to help support and educate the 159 orphans now in the home.

It takes a lot of money to do this and if merchants and traveling men will rally as earnestly as the Sunday school children it will do great good and the orphans and their will all be best. Mr. McCalla's business address is 415 Atlanta National bank building.

GEORGIA HAS FINE PEACROPS, SAYS WOODRUFF

"This has been a big season for peas in Georgia," observed A. J. Woodruff, manager of the Woodruff Machinery Manufacturing company. "We have sold more pea threshers this year than ever before. There was a large acreage planted in what this year and when the wheat was harvested the land was sown in peas. The pea crop is getting to be a big item in Georgia. With cotton bringing a good price and with peas bringing a good price and with a big crop of both, money's bound to be plentiful this year. Good times are upon us."

NEWS OF THE MOVIES

LANIER—Atlanta's newest and most beautiful picture house, will inaugurate a new and unique idea for the coming week. On Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, three real features of unusual merit will be shown and these features will be shown for the first time in Atlanta at this theater.

On Monday, "The Sleeping Beauty" a version of Grimm's most picture fairy tale, a tale that every child in every clime has been told. This gorgeous production will be appreciated by the old as well as the young.

"In the Clutches of the Ku Klux Klan" a true story of the exciting times of when the night riders ruled. Will be shown Wednesday and every school boy and girl as well as the grown up should witness this photo play for its historic value.

On Friday, "The Treasure of Devil's Vale," an intensely dramatic story full of thrills in schedule.

With every convenience for comfort, good music and the best in the film world this theater caters to lovers of motion pictures.

SAVOY—The past week marked a new era in the motion picture world when this theater presented Mrs. Pike the first of a series of "ray" famous plays—in moving pictures. Although the house was packed to its utmost capacity for the two days that this film was shown, it was not until the third day that it was known that this picture was not a flop.

It is a foregone conclusion that those who witnessed Mrs. Pike in the first series will be on hand to see Mrs. Pike in the second series. "The Bishop's Carriage," which will be shown shortly at this theater. Every one knows the story with its wondrous complications was run many times through the mind of the famous actress.

In conclusion something must be said about the famous Players' company. The settings for the scenes are the most beautiful of the films the most wonderful ever shown—in fact a new and distinct feature to make more wonderful the motion picture, has been added by this famous company.

CITY FARMERS

ATLANTA
WHO MAKE A HOBBY OF
PET FARMS

W.J. Telson
digging potatoes

THERE is rest, recreation, and the pleasure of a speaking acquaintance with nature, for the city man who takes to farming. There is also hope as he contemplates the thought of his own thin crop and looks forward to next year's rich yield.

But city farmers of Atlanta resent the suggestion that their acres give poor return for the plowman's labors. A hobby is a hobby, and it is as out of place to speak of the slow speed of a neighbor's automobile as of the triviality of his "pet farm."

Councilman J. R. Nutting has discovered upon his farm at East Lake the three agricultural seeds of Georgia. This farm, which lies across the road from the golf course of the Atlanta Athletic club, is fair and pleasing.

It is a farm of rich and productive acres, and has none of the air of a hobby or a diversion, thought of lightly and used to occupy idle hours. Upon the other hand, it bears proof of earnest tillage which has borne a profitable yield.

The richness of this soil arises from Mr. Nutting's discovery that dynamiting of land is a wonderful encouragement to the growth of crops. His method is to sink charges of dynamite at intervals, and to break the earth to a depth of three feet.

With this preparation, plants are enabled to send their roots further into the ground, and the soil to retain moisture even through a dry season.

Agricultural Hope of State of Georgia

"Undoubtedly," says Mr. Nutting, "the agricultural hope of Georgia lies in the dynamiting of land, the planting of alfalfa, and an increase in dairying and cattle raising."

"I have experimented with the effect of dynamite for the last year, and I find it is a preparation for planting which no plowing can equal. Next in importance is the growing of alfalfa. From a small lot which I raised last year I secured five cuttings. This year I shall plant three additional acres in alfalfa, and after I probably shall increase this crop."

"Alfalfa revolutionized Kansas, made it the richest state in the Union. And it can do almost as much for Georgia."

All this Mr. Nutting learned from his farm, which is near enough to the edge of the city to be called urban. Like other city farmers, he visits his country acres only once or twice within a week. But he has perfected a system which, followed faithfully by a superinmore superintendence. Nothing, she insists, can aid beauty more than work among the growing plants, under the fair open sky, with the sun tanning one's cheeks or freckling one's nose, or doing both.

As for David Yarbrough, he has discovered at his city farm, at 724 North Boulevard, how to keep root-on ears until Thanksgiving. His farm is the most urban in Atlanta. It is entirely within the city, and is faced upon this hand and that by paved streets, car lines, and other artificialities of the city. But it consists in eight acres, and five of this number are under cultivation.

He grows grains, garden produce, and hay; but the most interesting are the root-on ears which once kept until Thanksgiving. The year in question followed an oppressive summer with a mild winter, and until the day of Thanksgiving no frost had whitened the roofs. The thought occurred to Mr. Yarbrough that, perhaps, if he pulled corn by the roots, the ears would keep green into the winter; and he determined upon the experiment. He dug deep around each of the stalks, brought up as much of the roots as possible, and hung the corn within a store house. As the winter advanced the ears remained green, just as when the stalks were pulled from the ground; and upon the arrival of Thanksgiving he had green corn to serve along with turkey and the other usual accompaniments of the day.

Orchard Grass
Shoulder High

But his farming, despite the small number of acres under cultivation, is as serious as all city farming assuredly is. He makes a specialty of forage, and has grown clover which reached as high as his hips, and orchard grass which attained the height of his shoulders.

He makes it a rule to require two crops each year from each of the five acres which he tills. He begins in the winter by

LOST IN DRESS-MAKING RIDE

BY O. HENRY

Illustrated With a Drawing by Dom J. Lavin, the Famous American Artist

Mr. TOWERS CHANDLER was pressing his evening suit in his hall bedroom. One iron was heating on a small gas stove; the other was being pushed vigorously back and forth to make the desirable crease that would be later on extending in straight lines from Mr. Chandler's patent leather shoes to the edge of his low-cut vest. So much of the hero's toilet may be intrusted to our confidence. Our next view of him shall be as he descends the steps of his lodging house immediately doctored, calm, assured, handsome—in appearance the typical New York young chap, charming, smiling, out, slightly bored, to inaugurate the pleasures of the evening.

Chandler's honorarium was $18 per week. He was employed by an architect. He was a twenty-two considered architecture to be truly an art; and honestly believed—though he would not have dared to admit it in New York—that the Flatiron building was inferior in design to the great cathedral in Milan. Out of each week's earnings Chandler set aside $10. At the end of each ten weeks with the extra cashed one gentleman, he purchased the bargain counter of stinky old Father Time. He regarded himself as the regalia of millionaires and presidents; he took himself as a quarter where life is brightest and showiest, and there dined with taste and luxury. What a splendid man! for a few hours, play the wealthy idler to perfection. He was ample for a well considered meal, a bottle bearing a respectable label, commensurate with a smoke, cab fare and the ordinary etcetera.

This one delectable evening called from each dull seventy was to Chandler a source of intense delight. To the society bud comes but one debut; it stands alone sweet in her memory when her hair has whitened; but to Chandler each two weeks brought a new and thrilling, as new as the first had been. To sit among bon vivants under pale lights in the great hall, to music, to look upon the habits of such a paradise and to be looked upon by them—what is life's first dance and short-sleeved tulle compared with this?

Up Broadway Chandler moved with the vespertine dress parade. For this evening he was an exhibit as well as a gazer. For the next sixty-six evenings he would be a gazer, a cheviot and worsted at dubious table d'hotes, at whitened lunch counters, at sandwiches in his hall bedroom. He was willing to do that, for he was a true artist, and to him one evening in the dazzle made up for many dull ones.

Chandler protracted his walk until the Porties began to sing, for great glittering primrose way, for appreciation of it would add to his own triumph and pleasure.

"I think," he said to her, with frank gravity, "that your foot needs a longer rest than you suppose. Now, I am going to suggest a way in which you can give it that and at the same time do me a favor. I was on my way to dine with my lonely self when you came tumbling around the corner. You come with me and we'll have a cozy dinner—a pleasant talk together, and by that time your game ankle will carry you home very nicely, I am sure."

The girl looked quickly up into Chandler's clear, pleasant countenance. Her eyes twinkled once very brightly, and then she smiled ingeniously.

"But we don't know each other—it wouldn't be right, would it?" she said, doubtfully.

"My dear Miss Marian," said the young man, candidly, "I'll introduce myself—permit me to call you Miss Marian. I'll introduce myself—permit me to call you Miss Marian. I'll introduce myself—permit me to call you Miss Marian."

"Thank you," said the girl, softly but heartily. "I am sure you need not trouble yourself any further. It is a pleasure to be introduced to you. I am sure you need not trouble yourself any further. It is a pleasure to be introduced to you."

Chandler looked at the girl and found her swiftly drawing his face into a smile. He was a man of a certain type, and he was a man of a certain type. He was a man of a certain type, and he was a man of a certain type.

"My dear Miss Marian," he exclaimed, "Work! Think of dressing every day, for dinner, of making half a dozen calls in an afternoon!"

Then it was that the Madness of Manhattan, the Frong of Fues and the Bacillus of Brag, the Provincial Prose of Pose acted upon the young man. He was on Broadway, surrounded by pomp and style, and there were eyes to look at him. On the stage of that comedy he had assumed to play the one-night wonder, and he was a man of a certain type.

So he began to prate to Miss Marian of clubs, of teas, of golf and of a yacht lying at Larchmont. He could see that she was vastly impressed by this vague talk, and he endorsed his pose by random insinuations concerning great wealth, and mentioned familiarly a few names of Manhattan, the Frong of Fues and the Bacillus of Brag.

There were naturally two parties in every country—one which drew to it the people who trusted the people, the other which as naturally drew to it those who distrusted the people. That is the history of the world, and it is true today.

Third—if you are going to accomplish anything in this country, you must have faith in our form of government, and there is every reason why you should have faith in it. It is the best form of government ever devised by the mind of man, and it is spreading throughout the world.

FAITH

Copyright 1913 By William J. Bryan

By William J. Bryan

FAITH exerts a controlling influence over our lives. It is argued that what we do is not so much a matter of faith as of action. But faith comes first, words afterwards. Until one believes, he does not act. His action is not his faith, but his faith is his action. His action is not his faith, but his faith is his action.

Abraham, called of God, went forth in faith to establish a race and a religion. As a result of his faith a race has been produced not surpassed in its achievements by any other race in history, and as a result of his faith nearly four hundred million human beings are adherents of monotheistic religion.

It was faith that led Columbus to discover America, and faith again that conducted the early settlers to Jamestown, the Dutch to New York, and the Pilgrims to Plymouth Rock. Faith has led the pioneer to the West, through trackless forests, and faith has brought others in his footsteps to lay in our land the foundations of a civilization the highest that the world has known. Without faith, we are told, it is impossible to please God, and I may add that without faith it is impossible to meet the expectations of those who are most interested in us. Let me present this to you as a challenge.

First—You must have faith in yourself. Not that you should carry confidence in yourselves to the point of displaying egotism and yet, egotism is not the worst possible fault. My father was wont to say that if a man had the big head, you could whittle it down, but that if a man had the little head, there was no hope for him. If you have the big head others will help you reduce it, but if you have the little head, they cannot help you. You must believe that you can do things that you will not undertake them. Those who lack faith attempt nothing and therefore cannot possibly succeed; those with great faith attempt the seemingly impossible and by attempting prove what man can do.

Second—You must have faith in your fellow men. When one comes into competition with his fellows, he soon recognizes his own intellectual inferiority in superiority as compared with others. In China they have a very interesting third contest. The singing bark is the most popular bird there, and as you go along the streets of China, you see the Chingamen out, airing their voices. The singing bark is the most popular bird there, and as you go along the streets of China, you see the Chingamen out, airing their voices.

Real bear hunts have been "pulled off" a number of times recently in the State of Georgia. The singing bark is the most popular bird there, and as you go along the streets of China, you see the Chingamen out, airing their voices.

holds itself aloof from the struggling masses. It is too often cold and calculating. It is better to trust your fellow men and be occasionally deceived than to be distrustful and live alone. Mankind deserves to be trusted. There is nothing good in every one, and that good responds to sympathy. If you speak to the multitude and they do not respond, do not despair. They will respond to you if you have faith in them. If you have faith in them, they will have faith in you.

People differ in race characteristics. In national traditions, in language, in ideas of government, and in forms of religion, but at heart they are very much alike. I respect the pluck of the American, I respect the pluck of the American, I respect the pluck of the American.

Special Correspondence. SIOUX CITY, Ia.—Hail to the queen of babies! Let everybody salute this dainty mite of humanity who for the time being—wears the royal crown of baby perfection—Catherine Corr, of Osawa, Ia.

Baby Catherine is the nearest perfect specimen of babyhood so far produced in the world! She lacks just absolutely perfect!

Since this "better baby" movement has been given widespread publicity and great attention, there have been hundreds of baby fairs in which babies were judged and the nearest perfect awarded prizes.

This is the greatest of all ages in which to live. The roads and the telegraph wires have brought the corners of the earth into one another, and the world is now a single village. It is a time of great opportunity and of great responsibility. It is a time of great opportunity and of great responsibility.

State after state found nearly perfect babies only to learn that other baby fairs unearthed still nearer perfect infants.

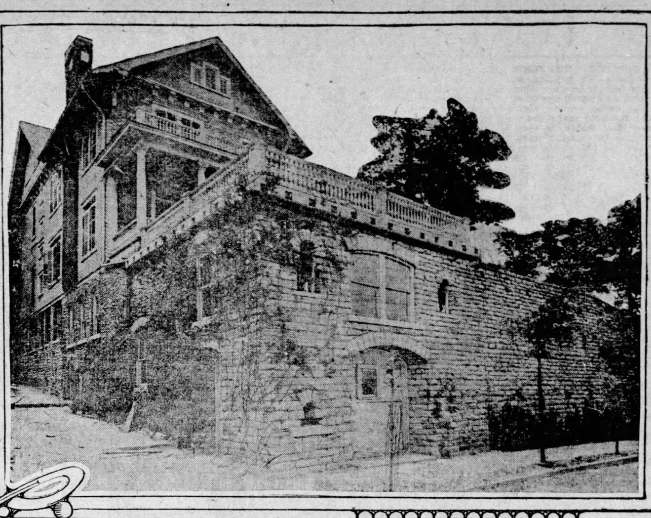

The "better babies" contest was the last of the interstate live stock fairs held at Sioux City. Nearly 400 of the best youngsters from Iowa, Nebraska, Minnesota and South Dakota entered the contest and were judged. Sioux City, being the hub between all these states, drew the pick of the best.

Catherine Corr, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Corr, of Osawa, Ia., was crowned the "better baby" of 1913. She was born on September 27, 1912. She is now 10 months old. She is a perfect specimen of babyhood. She is a perfect specimen of babyhood. She is a perfect specimen of babyhood.

FORT PEACE ATLANTA'S STRANGEST DWELLING

F. D. McMillan and His Dwelling at 20 West Fifteenth Street.

By Angus Perkerson

No house in any other city is like the dwelling of F. D. McMillan, at 20 West Fifteenth street. It seems at first a castle, protected by a strong wall, through which appear the mouths of cannon.

The wall is twenty-two feet high, and extends for 146 feet along Fifth street. As the passerby looks upward, the top of the wall is partly hidden by vines, and seems to reach toward the clouds. Just above his head are the mouths of cannon, which extend the length of the wall. Further upward is another row, and near the top projects a thin line, threatening Fifteenth street and a part of Peachtree.

But the menace is only a pretense, for the craft manner of a kindly person who hides his plot will under a benign expression. In reality the cannon are harmless pipe, whimsical enough in appearance, but headed for no more dangerous missiles than roses.

Through the mouths of these roses Mr. McMillan means to train vines and, in the spring and summer, he intends that roses shall hang down from the wall to greet whoever stops to observe or to visit Fort Peace.

The cannon, rather than the wall, is the dwelling's gentle name. The wall, indeed, is as thick as any wall, but it is a whim, which is built for actual defense. The squares of rock are piled one upon another until they have changed into a retaining wall to a fortress which has a medieval air.

The temple of granite is but a block from Peachtree street, where other houses are built in modern style, and other surroundings are modern. It seems at first a modern piece of architecture, but when you have seen the days of border warfare, but, by chance, was set down in this year, 1913.

THE BUILDER'S WHIM.
Yes, instead of being really an architect, it is a whim, which is different. He loathes man's aping habits; and while he is not a reader of Emerson, he believes with that sage Puritan in the need of original resistance. If what you do seems new to others and excites their discomfort at the banter of another, it is less serious than disgust at your own timidity.

For this reason he built a house which is contrary to all architectural plans, which is surrounded by a wall that might have done a quarrelsome job, as secured and remote as though it were in the heart of the hills, instead of a block from Peachtree street.

Next to being different, he wished to build a home within the city which should have the effect of the country. To gain this end, he built his house above the city, so that as he sat in his study, he could see Atlanta, and yet apart from it; he could see the city, and still be above it, and he can stand upon the observatory, which tops his house, and find all Atlanta beneath his feet.

AN ALPINE RESIDENCE.
The dwelling, which gives a different impression from every residence in Atlanta, seems, from this observatory, to be an Alpine residence, raised above all surrounding objects, and above all other buildings from the sky and the air. The elevation of his lot above the street makes the observatory equal in height to the tenth or perhaps the twelfth story of the Cavalier building. At least, engineers have given him this estimate, and upon the topmost part of the house all creation seems to be under foot.

When he chose his lot he thought of its "exaltation," its remoteness from streets and the humdrum, its possibility of seclusion and, yet, of convenience; its view over the city and into the hills.

Fifteenth street, at that time, had not been cut through, and the lot was merely the pinnacle of a hill. When the street was made the side walk was twenty feet lower than the lot, and others began to plan for him how he should grade in order to place his dwelling even with the city and upon a level with his neighbors.

"And all the while," he explains, "I meant to get as high into the air as I could, and there to build me a country home in the city."

"I had no architect, because I knew that I would borrow ideas from him, and I wanted no one's notions but my own. I intended to build a home that suited me, not someone else."

"Half the world lives a lifetime without ever doing what it wants to. Men and women become so used to imitation or so afraid of ridicule that they live out their lives borrowing ideas and expressions and habits, which before had been discarded."

DREW HIS OWN PLANS.
"I drew my own plans; I had this high wall built just as I wanted it. I designed the house to please myself, and I live here in my way."

Almost as different as the house itself is the owner, almost as rugged upon first sight, and wholly as whimsical and kindly upon nearer approach.

The wall and the cannon mouths, through which roses are to bloom, are but a part of his fanciful plans. The wall was built for seclusion; the rows of cannon which are to shelter roses are a pretty sentiment; his next plans have to do with art, in the side of the wall is a small entrance, which is for temporary use, and is to be supplanted later on by a double door opening from Fifteenth street. But as yet this large door, which is to carry out the medieval effect, has not been hung, although space has been cut in the wall and now boarded up. You enter by the small door into a grove, which is about twenty feet below the main floor of the house, and is chisely, even upon a summer day.

The sides are of red clay, the floor is sanded, but the rear wall is the object of interest. It has been hewn from a formation of solid rock, jagged and broken, giving to the passage the appearance of a cave that has penetrated far into the earth. The cool air, the shaded light and the quiet hearth out this effect. No other house ever had such an entrance.

Mr. McMillan lights two electric globes in the rear, and they shine upon the red rock. Pale light here and there glimmers, and in gloom. No painting could give better effect. But he intends a further improvement.

THE GREAT FEAT.
The greatest feat in all history was, to his mind, the crossing of the Alps in the bitter winter by Marshal MacDonald with 16,000 Frenchmen to attack the enemy encamped in Italy. He speaks with emotion of this undertaking, as though it had a personal concern for him, and he intends to commemorate it by an artistic effort which will be unique. MacDonald and his Frenchmen entered the mountain passes from a green and smiling country in which villages were scattered here and there. For ten feet from the wall he will reproduce in miniature, that country lying at the foot of the Alps. He has never been to foreign countries, and he must depend upon his own conception, gathered from books. But he will consult no artist, for then he would be hampered by another's ideas, and this work of art is to be no more an imitation than the rampart, entrance or the three rows of cannon.

He will picture the country which MacDonald approached the Alps, and, afterward, he will trace the journey over the mountains. MacDonald, he says, followed sixteen paths, and he will trace each of these sixteen tortuous ways on the wall of rock in the rear of the grotto-like chamber.

He will secure 16,000 manikins, some representing soldiers afoot, some cavaliers, some artillerymen, and these he will place upon the rocky paths until the picture is complete—the green country at the foot of the Alps, the mountains rising upward, the 16,000 troops pushing their way through the bitter cold to die upon the other side for the glory of the Little Corporal.

"I think it will be better than a painting," he says; "at least it will be different."

Upon the next floor, which is level with the earth, but is separated from the dwelling itself, he intended to build a swimming pool. But he fears that the pool would be the cause of an accident. So he changed his plans and made it into a music room.

From this floor one emerges into the yard, which is a tangle of vines and trees and is the country in the midst of the city; and by a path one approaches the porch, which is level with the top of the stone wall, through which the three rows of cannon project.

The house within follows the general plan of an old-fashioned country home, but in details it is "different." Over the fireplace in each room, for instance, is the coat-of-arms of one of the southern states. "Architects as a rule," says Mr. McMillan, "leave that space over the fireplace vacant. It is never a decoration; it is just a vacancy. Why shouldn't it be adorned with the coat-of-arms of some southern state?"

And why, he asks, should not the hallway run the length of the house, and the reception hall, "a modern abomination," be abolished? The old-fashioned hallway gives easy entrance and exit to and from all rooms, it admits the fresh air, it is the "intended" manner of hallway.

He also has his ideas of the height of steps. The architect usually plans them six or seven inches high.

"Now," Mr. McMillan, "Such steps are too high. They make climbing up stairs a hard task. I have nine only five inches, and the other way three old ladies were here, and walked from the first floor to the top without a grunt."

On top is the observatory. From there the eye can distinguish a water tower in Marietta, and ranges of hills on every hand. A recreation of Mr. McMillan is to stand upon the roof of his dwelling, high above the city, and look round him with field glasses.

He finds that one can then feel farther from men and nearer to God. But the greater part of his time is spent in his garden, which is hidden entirely from the street and has the air of being remote from cities. He is there trying a subirrigation system which has never before been attempted in Georgia. He believes that if the farmers in the country would follow the system which he has begun in the city their crops would double in yield.

As a young man, Mr. McMillan tried the old methods of farming, but changed to the business of a machinist, established a shop in Atlanta in 1883 for an eastern company and entered into business later as a partner in the Avery & McMillan Machine Company. But now he is sixty-nine years old; he has retired from business and devotes his labors to the country home which he has built within the city.

TO BLOSSOM WITH ROSES.
This dwelling, when completed, will have twenty rooms, and will blossom with roses and green plants. It is different from any other dwelling ever built, but it is far from being complete. The march of Marshal MacDonald and his 16,000 troops over the Alps is yet to be pictured, the three rows of cannon are to become flower pots, and lesser plans are to be finished.

But there is one room which will remain as it is. This room is reserved by Mr. McMillan for his papers and for occasional conferences upon business. Once it was said that he allowed no woman to enter this room, and that it was a closet which held a most mysterious skeleton. But this saying was a myth.

"I let women see, of course," he explained. "But a man must always be careful about women entering a room in which he keeps papers of value. The instinct of a man is to dust and sweep every corner, and they're apt to sweep away the most valuable papers on earth when they get into the midst of housecleaning."

"But it is strange how the story of that room has traveled. When ever a lady comes here she is miliinterested in the rest of the house. But I can see all along that she has her eye on that room. And before long she's going to ask if she can't see inside. I always tell each one that she can, but that no other woman can ever have the same privilege."

Over this little witticism he chuckles with satisfaction. His eyes twinkle. It is plain that no part of his strange dwelling is more whimsical than he himself. There he lives with his wife and his niece, content that he has built a house which is "different," and which apes no other man's plans, and determined to make it as much more different as God will allow.

An Anomalous Man

By A. F. FERGUSON.

An anomaly is, broadly speaking, something which isn't what it seems. Consequently there doesn't seem to be any impropriety in dubbing a man an anomaly who:

Never went to school in his life until he became a member of the faculty of a big university. Has at no time been connected with a military organization or society, army or navy, and yet is entitled to receive the salute of honor from every officer and soldier of the armies of at least four of the biggest nations of the earth;

And who, though a private citizen, a very retiring private citizen of the ideal American type, should happen to die in any one of the six world capitals, would be given a pompous military funeral with a glittering escort of soldiers.

There are probably a dozen other ways that Frederick William Taylor might be described, but to call him the greatest catch-as-catch-can anomaly on the face of the earth seems to be the quickest and most direct way of analyzing his many sided character.

Born in Nebraska in 1860, he has lived in most of the countries of the world and is now a resident of Manila, P. I., where he holds the position of director of agriculture.

Between times he found time to manage big irrigation projects in the west and southwest and get a firm seat at the very top of the crowd of scientific and practical farmers who are making seven or eight blades of grass grow in the self-same spot there wasn't a bit of acre before.

Raised as a nurseryman by his father, Taylor learned to call trees and plants by their first names before he knew the names of the presidents of the United States. He studied hard in the practical, as well as the scientific, side of his profession. He was called to the University of Nebraska as professor of agriculture and horticulture and was a pioneer in the organization of farmers' institutes in his state.

He taught agriculture in this country, Europe and Asia. He imported from Russia a new kind of oats which has become a staple with American farmers, and from Italy he was instrumental in getting the macaroni wheat. He taught Russians, Germans, French, Portuguese, Italians, Japanese and others how to grow things in their own countries.

He received grateful acknowledgments from the kings and queens and tsars and emperors in the form of presents and decorations. In fact when Taylor is all dressed up he looks like a Christmas tree—there is so much gilt lace and medals hanging on him.

RETURN OF THE HOOPSKIRT

Hoops are here! Not coming. Not threatened—as they have been for season after season—but actually here. Illustrated is a new waistline gown with a hoop tunic. The gown is of bright navy blue crepe de chine and has a graceful bodice and a very narrow, clinging skirt which exaggerates by contrast the distended line of the tunic. The tunic is of pleated blue chiffon, and for all the oddity of the mislaid gown, as it first meets the eye, there is an undeniable sauciness and chic about this new addition to autumn fashions. Long gloves of silk embroidered on the wrist and a pair of fine machine embroidered complete a really charming costume.

BY ALFRED W. BREWERTON.
CARTOONS have been called the "slang" of art, but you must remember that slang is sometimes very expressive. Cartoons, or picture ideas, are as old as the world. Away back in the stone age old sketches, scratching rude outlines of men and animals on flat pieces of stone, was the pioneer cartoonist.

"Today," says Prof. A. M. Brooks, of the Indiana university, "modern satire has taken the form of newspaper cartoons to a great extent. The cartoon has the advantage of the written article or editorial in that it conveys an idea instantly, while the editorial requires time. It is a universal language, reaching more people and giving more point and carrying power to an idea."

The good done by good cartoons would be hard to estimate. They move as well as instruct and amuse thousands of people every day. Some of the best cartoons of the day picture ridicule of moral, political, financial corruption or absurd customs are of a very high order. Much art is put into them; and, on the other hand, there are a great deal that are stupid and poorly drawn.

While the demand for cartoons is enormous and growing, the bulk of the supply is poor.

One cause, perhaps, is that there is no such thing as a real school for cartoonists. Many imagine they save in them the making of a great cartoonist. The amateur thinks as he does in his own incorrectly proportioned drawing a similarity to the trained exaggeration or caricature of the cartoonist. There should never be a distortion of drawing without a careful purpose.

It is becoming more and more necessary every year for cartoonists to draw well. Of course the idea is a part of the cartoon, but a good idea may be ruined in its execution. Still, some who draw very poorly have the power of making their points, and many a good craftsman cannot make his drawing significant.

TOO MUCH TEXT.
One great disadvantage to a cartoon is text. Many—far too many—cartoons contain too much text. In fact, it is rare to find a cartoon which is able to stand by itself without text, without even a label, where a man must furnish a drawing with an idea in it every day in the week he cannot limit himself to ideas which lend themselves to expression in black and white without words. It is a general good rule to say, "Leave out everything you can." Modern art is elimination, and the cartoon should express its ultimate simplicity.

One of the great virtues of Boardman Robinson's or Robert Minor's cartoons is their full sweep, the black laid on boldly and all unnecessary detail omitted.

But Bernhard Gillam, one of the great pioneer cartoonists of America, had many shortcomings as an artist, yet was a brilliant cartoonist, nevertheless.

C. G. Bush, another late veteran, was already well into his career when he dropped his newspaper work to go abroad and study for several years. And the brilliant work which he returned to do showed the wisdom of his course. So there can be no rule laid down.

I have heard the following recipe given for the making of a cartoonist:

"Take one good editorial writer and mix with two barrels of nerve, one bushel of talent for drawing, a ton of humor and an equal proportion of patience. Shake thoroughly before using. After hanging over a drawing board for about seven years and wasting a number of gallons of good ink and several thousand sheets of Bristol board, go out and separate some gullible editor from a few greenbacks per week in exchange for your masterpieces."

GETTING THE IDEA.
Getting your idea is "another thing again" for which there is no system. You should be constantly on the alert and, as a cartoonist once said, "The rule 'Leave your business at the office' does not fit a cartoonist," as he had often sat up in bed in the dead of night to make a rough note of an idea that he feared he might forget.

Timeliness is the keynote to a good cartoon. So a cartoon must generally be "hot from the bat" to be striking, and cannot be "cooked up" or made much in advance. News often changes over night, or more important news takes the place of that of the day before. Therefore most cartoons are drawn within a few minutes of the time of their appearance in the paper. Humor is the best ingredient, but when you scan the news columns of the day and note the vast number of murders, suicides, divorces, hold-ups, accidents and tales of woe, you often wonder if there is anything funny to draw about.

However, a serious cartoon is often most timely and paramount in importance. But it is well to avoid as much as possible the gloomy and melancholy side of life. A cartoonist might adopt for a motto that once popular little ditty, "Always Leave Them Smiling When You Say Good-bye."

Well, after you have found your subject, you walk round and round and spill on the ink breathlessly "until the idea pops into your head." This exercise of "chasing an idea" is said to be almost as good as playing golf. Then you generally put your idea into a rough sketch for submission to the editor for his official "O. K." which it does not always receive.

After that you settle down and outline your cartoon in pencil, and are about congratulating yourself that the worst excitement of the day is over and now all will be peace and plain sailing, when, hark! a prophetic the engraver, demanding in cruel and cutting tones, "Is that copy ever going to be ready? Place closes in two and three-fifths seconds."

SPILLING THE INK.
So you throw in your high gear and spill on the ink breathlessly for newspapers and the material must be handled on schedule time.

The actual drawing of a cartoon is often the part that can have the least time and attention, and then when you have finished your work, you have always the pleasure of looking forward to the fancy of the cold-blooded engraver, who never stops to make a new cut if the rout or accidentally cuts off the legs of a figure or the eyes of a face; and also what the stereotypers can do to an etching is something to cause another outburst.

After that, perhaps, it is time to stroll homeward for a little much-needed rest and refreshment, but with your mind still intent on an idea for the day to come, when you meet a dear (?) friend, who says, "Gee, what a cinch you have! Nothing to do until tomorrow!" It's a

French Fashion Notes

FOR some weeks there has been an interesting drama enacted on the stage of fashion, and Dame La Mode has been the premier of an infinite variety of artistic pieces. The most exquisite brocades, the most delicate furbings, jeweled trappings and metal ornaments in extravagant postures to create gorgeous costumes have been the Tuesday evening of the Comedie Francaise. The most beautiful of beauty. Never has there been such a display of magnificent costumes. The most delicate of furbings, the grace of draping are unrivaled and the most colorful of colors. The Bechhoff-David model of coral, blue and white, and the most beautiful and had a tunic of black chintz and a tunic of black chintz and lace. The touch of color was supplied by a velvet robe, which was tucked in at the corset.

CONCERNING HEALTH and BEAUTY

By MRS. HENRY SYMES

FEW of us return from our vacations without bringing a coat of tan, a bad case of sunburn or a skin marked with freckles. Those who are not afflicted with any of the three have skins which are not susceptible to the sun and wind or else they took great precaution before exposing their faces.

The latter is a good plan to "low" if we will but take the time and the proper articles along with us on our trip. All that one needs is a jar or tube of cold cream and a good brand of talcum powder. The former should be rubbed into the skin, the surplus rubbed off with a soft handkerchief and then a thin layer of talcum powder should be sprinkled over the face. Remember to do this the next time.

The face readily inflames during the summer months, especially if one has a sensitive skin. It is, therefore, to every girl's advantage if she will try to keep in mind that she should not wash the face immediately upon entering the house after playing tennis, rowing or engaging in any other exercise. Rub a little cream into the skin, and after ten minutes wash the face in tepid water. One should not shrink excitedly in hot weather. Exercise gets rid of the

The wearing of a mask will be valuable to the girl who is at business all day and is, therefore, prevented from treating her face during those hours. The mask is made of fine linen, from which are cut out pieces for the eyes, nose and mouth. Spread on the inside of the mask a paste made of olive oil and almond meal. Allow this to remain on the face for several hours or keep it on all night. When it is removed, bathe the face with tepid water and you will be surprised at the softness of the skin. The mask applied several nights in succession will soon bleach the skin and leave no trace of sunburn or tan.

A very simple procedure which has helped many girls to bleach and soften the skin is to bathe the face on rising in warm milk and sulphur. Add a tablespoonful of the latter to a quart of the former.

When the arms are covered with a coat of tan they can be bleached by applying to them peroxide and water. Another successful remedy for whitening the arms and the face and neck, for that matter, is to bathe daily with buttermilk. This will also make the skin as smooth as velvet.

If the neck is suffering from the sun's kisses, rub it with a cucumber lotion, which can be made by the following directions:

THE SEASON'S LINGERIE NOVELTIES

by Josephine Jordan

DRAWINGS BY DAGMAR
RASMUSSEN

Princess slips are now a combination of a brassiere and a petticoat.

The newest nightgowns are made of silk and cut ankle length.

The Tango corset is made entirely of elastic and slips on over the head.

Owps de chine nightgowns are simply trimmed with ribbon and lace frills.

LINGERIE is flimsier and more cobwebby than ever this season. "Muslin underwear" is now a misnomer, for most of the season's lingerie is fashioned of the finest of sheer French nainsooks, delicate hand-knitted laces, and soft silks. Clogs de chine never has been used so extensively as it is this season for undergarments of all sorts.

There is just as much ingenuity used in the designing of the new lingerie as has been displayed in the fashioning of the models for the new gowns. The smart gown demands there shall be no fullness underneath its perfectly fitted lines, so the new models in lingerie are absolutely without fullness. There are no ruffles except of the most filmy net. There is no trimming except the flat bands and blindings.

For machine embroidery intended for lingerie purposes, fine nainsooks, batistes, sheer crepes, and even organzies are used as foundations. Some of them are in drawn thread effect, thus adding to the transparency and lightness of the material. This in addition to the open designs seen in some of the new embroideries and the lace-like work in some of the patterns, gives a distinctly new character to the fashionable lingerie embroidery.

Allovers are well liked for the season's lingerie. They are used for entire garments, including nightgowns, brassieres, corset covers, and even culottes. This is an entirely new idea in the use of embroideries. Before this allovers have been used as insets or as yokes or as trimmings in various fashions, but they never have been used as "the stuff that lingerie is made of," and the garments that they produce are almost like the stuff that dreams are made of.

Pertains the most audacious change that the new debutante slouch style has brought about is the change in the style of corsets. To give the desired languor to the effect of a costume one must be theoretically uncorrected. There are so few women who can be that actually, with any sincere whatever, that the corsetiers have spent their best energies on the construction of models that will give the uncorrected effect, but provide support and just the proper amount of restraint.

The most extreme style of this season's models is one to which the name of the "Tango" has been given because it is particularly suitable for the diversion of tangoing. It is made entirely of elastic. It slips on over the head. There are short laces in the back above the waist line and at each side to tighten the elastic over the hips. One of the new ideas in corsetry is the use of elastic laces. They "give" as silk laces do not and add to the general careless and lazy effect that is so much in demand. To return to the "Tango." There is practically nothing above the waist. There are only two short pieces of bonings in the front. But they are negligible as bonings. This model is guaranteed to give absolutely free action to the body.

Naturalness Is End Sought.

Many of the new corsets slip over the head. That obviates the use of stiff fastenings. Almost all of them are low in the waist. The whole tendency of modern fashion is toward the supple little figure, and everything that makes the silhouette right or conformed must go. Naturalness—even if it be obtained by artificial means—is the watchword of fashion designers today, and the fact that the attempt to obtain that effect leads to occasional extremes is unimportant.

Extreme or not, the new corsets are much more comfortable without a single bone, than those of the period of the all boned, high bustled, armorlike encasements that we used to wear. American women will probably be a little slow to accept the all elastic slips, which have been received with so much joy by the Parisienne, but the most conservative of them will welcome the new tendencies in the construction of their corsets.

The new figure line demands a straight back and hips and a slightly rounded front contour, and this is best obtained by the front lace corset, which allows the wearer to adjust the corset to suit her special requirements and assures the smooth flat back. The low bust, the long corset skirt, and the use of flexible boning, in small quantities, are characteristic of all sorts of the best new designs, whether they be front lace or back lace.

The changes in the styles of corsets have made the use of the brassiere almost imperative. Manufacturers have brought out more elaborate models than at any previous time. They are handsomely trimmed. They are made of the sheerest and most pliable of fabrics and are boned and draped in, at the waist to give a soft effect. They have entirely taken the place of the corset cover of old. Quite another type of brassiere is the garment which is worn as an auxiliary to the new elastic corset. It is made of tricot or of rubber webbing, and gives a most supple effect. When made of elastic it has the advantage of being a reducer as well as a brassiere.

While the corset cover has left the fashionable lingerie wardrobe and the "combination" is rather a thing of the past, there has come into style new combinations of garments that are at once practical and lovely. One of the newest is the combination of the chemise and the culotte. It is made of the softest of crepe de chine and is worn instead of the vest. It has almost no trimming.

One of the New Designs.

The culotte is one of the new designs. It is better known as the knickerbocker. Although it is usually combined with the chemise, it is often worn separately. Some of the fancy culottes to be worn with costumes which have the underskirt made in one piece with the gown are fashioned of silk a few shades lighter than the costume. Often figured silk is used for them. They are fetching little garments.

Silk petticoats will, of course, be worn, but they will be of the thinnest silk obtainable. They are often made of a heavy silk chiffon, and more often than not they are fastened into the gown with which they are to be worn. They are slashed as to hem, narrow as to width, and soft and lovely as to texture.

Princess slips are no longer what they were. They are now a combination of a brassiere and a petticoat—that is, the top of the slip is fitted and sewed on to the petticoat. It seems like a combination of two distinct garments, for the top is trimmed handsomely or made of a dainty allover embroidery, and the skirt is plain.

One of the most distinct changes in the season's lingerie is the change in the length of the nightgown. The newest nightgowns are made ankle length. The hems are either slashed or curving, after the fashion of the hems of the new dresses. Some of these short nightgowns—they come only to the instep—have full length sleeves and low necks. They are beautifully trimmed with hand work and the finest of lace. Many nightgowns are made of silk. One particularly attractive one was made of printed silk in Chinese design in yellow and brown on a white ground. In cut the nightgown was of the simplest kimono form rather scanty in its proportions and finished without a collar. It was drawn together with a silk cord on the ends of which were tassels.

So filmy has Dame Fashion declared that all undergarments must be that net is being used for all sorts of dainty lingerie, even for the winter wardrobe. It is impossible to spend too much thought upon one's lingerie. It has never been so handsome nor so comfortable in spite of its absolute plainness. A little of the newest lingerie is worth the price of a king's ransom, though it is as light as the blizzard.

Collarettes of marabout are short and wide and finished with a bow and ends. They come in exquisite chinchilla mixture, a softly shaded gray, and a variety of new Parisian shades.

Serge comes serenely to the front with great success. It is washable, comes in convenient widths, and in checks, shadow stripes, or plain colors. It is especially adaptable for the college girl.

Wool rattines for fall come in lovely shades of navy and tobacco brown, amethyst, taupe, sapphire, and the like blue.

Bodies of evening gowns are more wisps of transparent stuff. It is left for the skirt and sash to show the actual richness of the gown material.

Fure of every imaginable kind are photographed for winter, and some will be dyed canary yellow, blue, and other amazing shades.

Net gumples can now be had in ecru and flesh colors as well as white.

Hand done French knots are seen on the black and white for autumn; so is fagoting.

DOES ATLANTA ATTEND CHURCH?

OPINIONS OF VARIOUS MINISTERS UPON THE QUESTION OF ATLANTA'S CHURCH GOING

Do people go to church? If they do not—why? What is the remedy? These are the three questions which have been asked of four Atlanta ministers, and which have been answered variously by them.

Dr. John E. White, pastor of the Second Baptist church, answers "yes" and "no" to the first question, and then explains that he means the actual number of people attending church has grown during the last several years but that also the proportion of churchgoers to the city's population has diminished.

Dr. George L. Hanscom, pastor of the Central Congregational church, says that the people generally attend church those days as well as they ever did.

Dr. Hugh K. Walker, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, declares that there has been a decrease in the number of churchgoers, but that people other than the churchgoers have multiplied and kept pace with the rapid increase in the number of church buildings.

Together, these Atlanta ministers offer an interesting symposium upon the subject of churchgoing. Dr. White, for instance, declares the argument that Sunday evening church services are poorly attended because their sermons are usually too topical.

"The churches, made up of prosperous people, which are run on the conservative and doctrinal side, are the emptiest of all on Sunday evenings," says he. He attributes to a combination of causes the decrease which he acknowledges there is in the ratio between churchgoers and population.

His view of the entire matter is interesting. STATISTICS PROVE INCREASE.

So also is that of Dr. Hanscom, who cites statistics to show that in 1900 there was one communicant for every 145 of the population, while in 1910 there was one communicant for every 145 of the population, the increase during the century having been over 200 per cent.

"Present day pessimism, while looking at the spots on the sun, does not lose sight of the sun itself," says he.

Dr. Hugh K. Walker, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, is of the opinion that more people than ever before are in the habit now of going to church.

Much depends on the locality, says he. "Generally, however, the churches are numerous." Dr. Walker comments on the large increase during recent years in the number of church buildings; yet, says he, all continue to be attended comfortably.

Particularly was the churchgoing habit notable in my experience, at least, in Los Angeles," says Dr. Walker. "Frequently for half an hour before the services were due to begin, and sometimes for as long as an hour, the church auditoriums were filled, and if people wanted to get seats they had to go early."

"I don't find that the churchgoing people are any less numerous than they were twenty-five years ago."

He understands that there is a good deal of complaint in England about lack of interest in church services, but he believes there is little complaint of that nature here. As far as he can judge, taking morning services as a standard, I think they are attended as well as they ever have been.

Church membership is growing enormously, will keep pace with the increase in number of church buildings. Last year, for example, the largest of additions to the Presbyterian church membership was 1,500 members.

CHURCH MUST ATTRACT THEM. Rev. Caleb A. Ridley, pastor of Central Baptist church, answers as follows:

"I have never been in sympathy with a lot of newspaper and magazine stuff which declares that folks will not go to church."

"I was born and reared in the country, where everybody went to church and since entering the ministry some sixteen years ago I have held pastorates in a town of 1,500 people, next in a little city of 8,000, then in a city of 30,000, and finally winding up in Atlanta with its more than 200,000 population.

"I give this wide range of experience with different kinds and classes of people in order to say that I have never known a community where its people would not respond to the right sort of effort upon the part of the church and its pastor."

"I do not believe that you can send and hold folk to the church by using magic lanterns or magic anything else except the plain gospel of Jesus Christ. I have never known this to fail, provided the church members supplemented the preaching by the warm personal touch of personality."

"Churches themselves are often responsible for the empty pews whose vacant stare punctures the pastor's message and makes it fall limp and dead at his feet."

"Thousands of people have the idea that the church does not care for them. It is up to us to show them their mistake, and if we do not do it, why blame them for staying away? No self-respecting man will go where he is not wanted."

"Ten first-class, warm-hearted Godly men can change the atmosphere of the average church in a month's time. If preachers and people will generate a wholesome, evangelistic atmosphere in the churches, there will be no room for complaint as to congregations."

"I do people go to church? This question implies a comparison, viz: do the people of this day attend church as generally as in other days?"

"So far as my own observation and investigations go—yes! Looking back over the years, comparing the church attendance in country and city, as it was a quarter of a century ago with what it is at the present time, I cannot see any diminution; rather an increase."

"Going back still farther and comparing the church communicants with the population (number of communicants is less than number of attendants) we face suggestive facts."

"Carefully prepared statistics for the century between 1800 and 1900 show the following conditions:

1800, one communicant in 1400 inhabitants.
1850, one communicant in 637 inhabitants.
1870, one communicant in 575 inhabitants.
1890, one communicant in 500 inhabitants.

1900, one communicant in 425 inhabitants.

"These statistics are evangelistic only. "II. and III. These two questions have no 'church standing,' as is indicated by the facts presented in consideration of question No. I. "A careful survey of the church in its world-wide mission reveals the fact that the human race is not going to rack and ruin and that conditions are growing better rather than worse. Present day pessimism, while looking at the spots on the sun, needs to have its vision so connected that it will not lose sight of the sun itself."

DR. WHITE'S VIEW OF IT. Dr. John E. White, pastor of the Second Baptist church, replies as follows:

"Attendance on the stated services of the churches falling off? Yes and no. "Actually the number of people attending churches regularly each Sunday in this country is larger than ever."

"In the south the increase in the total number of church sittings during the past ten years has been remarkable."

"In Atlanta the number of churches has doubled in twelve years. At the same time there are more people not attending church services than ever before and the ratio of church attendance to population even in Atlanta is declining."

"What is the explanation of the decrease of the churchgoing conscience and habit? No one cause may be assigned for it but a combination of causes."

"In the rural sections the falling off is due mainly to natural causes—the movement to the cities and the springing up of small towns and the improved means of country travel."

"In the city and town the churchgoing does not appeal to the new citizens as the country church meeting had done, as a social opportunity, and the churchgoing habit falls away easily."

SPIRIT OF THE TIMES. "But the general discouragement of churchgoing is due to the spirit of the times. All over the world there is a growing laxity of conviction and appointment. The formal religious habit is losing much of its old-time claim upon conscience."

"There is a new and compelling conception of the essential worship of God outside churches—an emphasis permeating the public mind about their energies during the whole week between Sundays."

"Within the church also are organizations, like the Sunday school, which unavoidably decrease the appeal of the preaching service of the churches."

"It is estimated that in Atlanta less than 50 per cent of the Sunday school attendance remains for the church service."

THE MAN IN THE STREET. "But the man in the street—Why does he decline to cut out the church?"

"This is indeed a real question. "So far as Atlanta is concerned the situation of this man is one for the churches to consider."

"If he has wealth he has an automobile, or belongs to a golf club and Sunday is his best day for self-indulgence. He often supports the church, even belongs to it; but attendance on its services would be Lord knows; and very often the preacher knows too."

"Some one suggested that perhaps the Sunday evening service were too popular and too sensational, and that day evening service. What it is, the Lord knows; and very often the preacher knows too."

"Tan, a big leopard, is just going to be taken when players act with these big beasts."

But there is always a chance to be taken when players act with these big beasts."

The studio, a short distance out of Port Lee, is a low, one-story building, standing in the center of a small wood. The studio is equipped with a stage, scenery and sky-light, all essential to the operation of any moving picture plant. The animals are kept in a large menagerie adjoining the studio, and are taken out only for the daily rehearsals.

M. Bourgeois has his own way of managing these creatures. It is not by leather whip and red hot iron bars, but by patience, firmness and kindness.

With a few slight exceptions, the principles of animal posing and human acting are the same. When a film requiring beasts is to be made, the animals are first trained regularly in their simple movements until the performance becomes a habit, since they respond to instinct rather than intelligence."

Originally must be used by the trainers to make their charges do the right thing at the right time for the camera man. For this purpose, common devices include coaxing, tree branches with honey to keep them aloft the entire length of a scene or exposing a chicken, off the stage, when the fox should jump out of a window."

The animals feel at home only when in the studio. Consequently the company of human actors is sent to Port Lee when a film with animals in it is made.

A remarkable circumstance is the fact that the players are seldom hurt by the animals.

Women, maintains the director, seem even more fearless than men, and the beasts, in turn, seem to show more confidence when with them and with children.

The Modest Minister. (Special Cable to The Journal.) COPENHAGEN.—M. Pedersen, the Danish minister of agriculture, has returned, after some weeks' stay in England, where he has studied seed and holdings experiments and visited the garden cities, both of which have impressed him immensely.

"My daughter," the minister said in an interview, "accompanied me on my excursion. She is a general servant with a family in London. To begin with, her people were 'very English,' and would not allow her to go out with me, but when they learned who I was matters passed off very smoothly."

PHOTOGRAPHS TAKEN UPON SUNDAY AT THE ENTRANCES OF VARIOUS CHURCHES. DO THESE CROWDS INDICATE A NEGLECT OF

church habits on Sunday have forced him into unconsciously.

"Now a great mass of church members line up with this man on churchgoing only half way. They cut out the Sunday evening service. If your reporter would go into any one of the fourteen larger and wealthier churches in Atlanta on Sunday night he would discover less than 10 per cent of its membership in attendance."

CUTS SERVICE'S HEART.

"There is something about culture, wealth and social distinction that cuts the heart out of a church's Sunday sermons savor too much of local reference and application.

"No, no, dear sirs, it is not that. The churches made up of prosperous people, which are run on the conservative and doctrinal lines, are the emptiest of all on Sunday nights."

"What is to be done about it? "As for Sunday evening attendance, there is no complaint from those who spread the gospel of the Kingdom of God—the gospel with a present, pointed application in it—the gospel of sympathy with souls tried and tempted and with a clear day evening service. What it is, the Lord knows; and very often the preacher knows too."

Nina had been in the room for about 15 minutes when she heard a loud noise. She turned on the light and saw a man standing in the doorway. He was wearing a dark jacket and a hat. He looked at Nina and said, "What are you doing here?" Nina said, "I'm just looking for my bag." The man said, "Your bag is in the room next door. It's on the bed." Nina said, "Thank you." The man said, "Don't tell anyone about this." Nina said, "I won't." The man then walked out of the room. Nina then went to the room next door and found her bag on the bed. She took her bag and went back to her room. She then called the police and told them what had happened. The police then went to the room and found the man. They arrested him and took him to the station. The man was then charged with burglary and possession of stolen property.

the suburbs—and taking therefrom a lot of bank notes, handed it to the detective. Then, catching his opponent by the collar, he said: "You were 'He has escaped?' worried the man is better so; I intended that he should be. I am not a fool, and I know the value of him. We could not arrest him without making all this public. He will give you a reward."

"And now that Mrs. Pauvel and myself are reconciled, now that the past is forgotten, will you grant me the pleasure of a visit?" asked Bertoni.

"I have promised him that he shall see Madeleine; have I your consent?"

"I have no objection," he replied the banker.

"Somehow Prosper and Madeleine must be reconciled and he will see her after that."

"And you promised me that you would send Caliste for me," cried Nina.

"I will do so," said Bertoni. "Wait quick, dexterous, momentous Lecca is off his wig and false whiskers and is going to be arrested."

"Caliste?" she cried.

"No, not Caldas, but Lecoq, the detective."

"Caldas," cried Gipsy. "Have pity on—I am so miserable." He and the detective returned to leave the room, but the detective stopped the detective and the two were left alone there.

Of course Lecoq took his errand back again and on the fifteenth of next month there was celebrated at the Church of the Notre Dame de Lourdes the marriage of Prosper Berthoumy and Jeanne Fauvel. The great ballroom is still in the Rue de Provence, as M. Fauvel has retired from business, the name of the firm is now Prosper Berthoumy & Co.

WASTE NO MORE STOCK ON JUNK

LARGE SIZE FORTUNE IS INVESTED EACH YEAR

AND OTHER SCRAP.

BY WARD S. GREENE.

ONE uses a time, so the Arabians Knights relates, a fat Turk sat in the sun beneath the arch of Bagdad's wall and wondered if he could beat the world's record for a ham-bone. A dried date or something. And as he drew away there among the ruins of the caliph's kitchen and the old shirts and cigarette stumps which the caliph's seven wives had pitched out of the back window of the harem, a brilliant idea struck him.

It is only had the energy, he thought, it would be very easy to scrounge around among the backwaters of the city and have together enough discarded skirts and cigarette stumps and gnawed bones of Persian dogs to make a respectable pile, the sort of pile, for instance, that the makers of scrolls would pay many places to possess.

The tale goes on to recount how the Turk became himself a rich caliph and in turn had numerous wives who carried him and his cigarette stumps over the harem wall. Only now there were many other men and carts off for the makers of scrolls to transfer into sheets of white parchment.

This Turk, the Adam of the junk trade, little knew that he had laid out a calling which was some day to become a great business, followed by people in every country under the sun.

A REAL BUSINESS.

The junk dealer's life is at a legitimate profession, a business which not only means the circulation of millions yearly and which has its markets and trade journals just as every other business, but which is a real benefit to humanity.

What a blessing it is sometimes to have the junk man back his wagon up the rear drive and pour forth the old tin cans and bottles and broken furniture that have been accumulating all winter in the cellar!

What a fearful thing it would be if all the waste matter of the world were to be discarded! Why, we would soon be swamped in an avalanche of old newspapers, rags, and bottles, or else the government would have to turn the United States army into a legion of "white wings" to chase the junk into the two oceans.

It is a big business, too, because the average citizen has no conception. On a lay spring afternoon one can see far off down the Atlanta street a legion of "white wings" to chase the junk into the two oceans.

ways actively at work through Atlanta's streets; and that twenty or thirty more make a practice of touring from city to city throughout Georgia in their search for junk.

An outsider would consider a junk dealer of a very low stratum of existence, almost next to a chow man in a cheap musical comedy. But as a matter of fact the junk dealer very likely has an income just triple the size of those who scoff at him.

Dealers figure that some Atlanta peddlers make from three to five hundred dollars a month. Junk peddlers have been known to retire from the business and spend their declining years touring Europe.

Not did they stop in Bagdad to drop a tear on the tomb of him who started them on the road to fortune. Rather did they wonder who the old junk was that built the minareted caliph's tower.

The beauty of the junk dealer's trade is that he seldom fails to have enough material to supply the demand. He can use anything. And anything means everything. Pins, shoes, boots, bones, paper, old iron, new zinc, clothes, food, any and all are swept into the dealer's raw, waste that is saved.

Of late a new material has sprung into prominence. That is auto junk. Castings, worn out tires, inner tubes, brass fittings, machinery, leather, are available for the junk dealer.

KINGS OF JUNKDOM.

The peddlers are but the outposts of the real junk kings. The men who make junk dealing a real profession carry on a trade that is as brisk as any ever known by the old-time peddlers in cloaks and suits. One man in Atlanta has three large warehouses where he stores his stuff. He ships it away in carloads to iron mills, to rubber foundries. It is said that one junk dealer in Atlanta is the largest shipper of paper trade in an institution in itself.

He runs a peddler dealer in paper and has a specialty. He hasn't time for anything else.

Nor is the junk trade any "little business" profession. A deal is pulled off in the game sometimes that is the equal of many an operation in Wall street or the cornering of the Chicago wheat pit. The peddler may deal for beer bottles, the big men in the business are the kings of junkdom. They are the men who make junk dealing a real profession. They carry on a trade that is as brisk as any ever known by the old-time peddlers in cloaks and suits.

business traffic in buildings and whole towns.

A junk dealer will handle anything from a brass tack to the dismantling of the biggest structure in the city of Atlanta. If a modern Croesus should buy fifty acres of land on the outskirts of the city he might find on it a rambling pile of iron and tin that was once a roaring mill or foundry. He doesn't want it, nobody else wants it, apparently.

Here's where the junk dealer comes in. He takes the whole works, lock stock, and barrel, buys it for a song, leaves it away by the carload to a big iron foundry in another city, and there reap a handsome profit.

Should a junk dealer have an offer of a dozen broken-down threshing machines, and knows that at best he can make but five dollars profit on them, he will take them. He has a hunch, although the deal involves several hundred dollars, he will put it through. And he banks the five dollars and thanks the Gods for it.

The big fellows have a king of finance. He is a power in the business world. The rusty fellows who drive around in carts are not the big boys.

When the cart-man gets a fair load he drives to a big dealer, sells it to him, and the latter in turn transfers it into some mighty smelting plant. The big dealers are the clearing houses between cart-men and mill-owners. They have hundreds of employees, too, experts who can glance over a carload of iron, tin and all sorts of rubbish and separate it into lots of equal value. When the average man looks at a pile of junk, it is just a pile of junk. The expert looks at it, here's a door-knob worth so much, there's a rusty bolt, worth so much, again, an old ribb lock, so much. These men receive good pay for separating the great from the lesser. And never in their rapid glance over the junk pile do they cast one item into the discard. Nothing that comes to the junk pile is thrown away. There's some use in it somewhere, is the dealer's motto, and by that motto, he converts the veriest atom into dollars and cents.

THE JUNK MARKET.

The big fellows have to keep abreast of the times in the world of junk. They must watch the market, the junk market, which fluctuates, rises and falls, even as the cotton exchange or the stocks of the greatest railroads.

Atlanta dealers must know what rates are bringing in London day by day. They must keep track of the South American rubber. Every change may mean more money or less money right here in little old Atlanta.

To do this they must take the junk papers, the junk magazines. These give full quotations of stocks in new iron and steel, scrap iron, cuttings, wastes, paper, cotton rags, hides, furs, bones.

The "dope" on some of these markets is not without humor, especially to the layman. Such a quotation as "old boots and shoes have been devoid of anything new in the line of developments; the market has been very quiet during the week, is startling to the man who only knows boots and shoes as very inanimate objects."

There was once a little boy who looked down at his little boots, all worn at the heels and scuffed at the toes, and looked up at his mother, and said, "Mama, where does shoe leather go?"

The wise mother sighed and said, "Honey, to the junk man."

She was right. Every little shoe sole has a junk man all its own.

Miss Grace O'Ryan, a Pretty "Co-Ordinator."

It gives one the grace and beauty of the olden days before bodies and souls were cramped by whalebone and shoe leather. It brings the roses to one's cheeks and the tan to much of the rest of one. And it frees one's soul.

Simplest thing in the world! One co-ordinates with a bow and arrow, prancing around one's lawn in one's bare feet, wearing a sort of Greek drape, and one has a high board fence around one's yard. This is a photograph of Miss Grace O'Ryan, one of the prettiest members of Chicago's co-ordinate club. The co-ordinator is a woman who has a high board fence around one's yard. This is a photograph of Miss Grace O'Ryan, one of the prettiest members of Chicago's co-ordinate club. The co-ordinator is a woman who has a high board fence around one's yard.

Mrs. von Vliesingen's class meets at the home of Mrs. Turk-Baker, at the corner of Grove and Maple streets. There, in sunny seclusion, with the wind tossing their gossamer garments, they slip back into ancient days and shoot arrows and caper and co-ordinate to their heart's content.

The idea is that by such untrammeled gambling the body and soul are brought into complete unity—"co-ordination," and thus soul freedom is attained.

But one has to be careful, else one gets stone bruises on one's feet and sunburn on one's knees.

cause he did not understand or know about the others. He offered the excuse that he had been out of the State for a long time until he returned for the closing of the campaign.

Think of what that means. It is dreadful to contemplate! It means the perdition of politics. It is time for the American people to abandon the superstition of adorning the ballot and praying to the ballot box.

Man takes his flirting lightly, and woman takes hers tragically, but both of them must pay the piper equally!

And though they are exchanging a cheap commodity, they must pay the good coin of true love.

What is love's medium of exchange?

"Kisses," murmurs seventeen. "Work," says the wife. "Tears," sobs the widow. And "regret" sighs the flirt, man or woman. But all these are only the copper, nickel, paper and silver currency in the kingdom of love.

The standard of value, the golden coin of love is the opinion of the beloved!

And therefore do all those who first pay the highest price for their bargain court samples of inflation sentiment. Paid for in the coin of the other's opinion. And because he, the other's opinion, and it eventually leads to emotional bankruptcy, prove all that a model husband should be, that whatever he is or is not will magnify common civility to another woman into a crime.

And that is the very high cost of man's flirting.

There is no horror so great to a woman as to lose the good opinion of the man she loves.

There is no experience so fatal to the peace of man as to lose the faith of the woman who loves him. And, therefore, is flirting a scary venture.

For there is no counterfeit coin to bribe the piper with.

What does she think of me? These are test questions when a flirt and a woman are more than friends.

If they are embarrassed by the answer they must expect to get the piper's bill.

If they are proud of the answer Cupid himself will come collecting and will offer a marriage license as receipt in full.

Man sticks to all the sex traditions about woman more obstinately than woman herself.

Did he not make them, all for his own good and glory?

And he has blurted ways of belittling her, and has been given a pass. So he promptly tires of the woman flirt, and he establishes himself in his traditional right to speak slightly of her.

So woman loses where she would gain most—in the respect of the men she has flirted with.

Now a man may flirt with a whole shipload of fair summer tourists, and still keep a holy place in his heart for the one girl.

The one girl is going to end him out. And then, to the end of his days, she will distrust him!

She may marry him. He may flirt with the highest price for their bargain court samples of inflation sentiment. Paid for in the coin of the other's opinion. And because he, the other's opinion, and it event-

Adoring the Ballot and Praying to the Ballot Box

By Bishop Warren A. Candler

THE American people have the habit of looking upon monarchical governments as obsolete and superstitious types of civil order.

They are accustomed to refer to them as "the effete monarchies of old world." And there may be an element of truth in our conception of them. The apocryphal reverence paid to kings, some of whom at least are unquestionably men of small ability and low character, is justly considered by us as a relic of a bygone age.

There is no monarch on the planet today as much worshiped as many of his subjects. The premises of the throne are far superior to their sovereigns.

While all this is true, the people have not been able to free themselves from a superstition of an opposite character. They are still prone to believe in the "rule of the majority."

The fathers and founders of the republic did not believe in the rule of the majority. The majority can never be mistaken, and never commit a sin. It is not proper to believe in a sin.

Neither the Federal nor the state governments are ruled on any such false principle. These governments are ruled by the rule of the majority under constitutional limitations. The principles of right and justice that should be allowed to guide the government are not to be swayed by the majority.

less multitude, flattered by such nonsense, fall in with the folly, forgetting that any of them may be oppressed and wronged by the fictitious majority any day.

Growing out of this superstition of "majority rule" are several other rank superstitions.

We have exalted the ballot box to the place of the ark of the covenant with the divine laws of eternal righteousness. We vainly imagine that a new law or a change of the officers of the old law will remedy all evils and promote every kind of good.

By consequence we have an over-supply of legislation and far too many elections. We neglect to make the efforts of a moral and religious nature which would really cure many evils and exhaust our energies on making laws to cure these evils which laws really can not reach the source of the trouble.

Then when our laws fail, we proceed to elect new officers and refer to repealing or amending the laws. Thus our statutes are kept perpetually in a flux state, and our country is filled with office-seekers who are ready to promise anything to the official position, occupied by the men against whom we complain.

Such conditions of chaotic legislation, multiplied candidates for office and manifold elections, respect for law is impaired and reverence for authority is destroyed. If the process is continued, the end will be anarchy and revolution.

It is to be feared that marriage itself is being discouraged by the law; but it is to be feared that marriage itself is being discouraged by the law; but it is to be feared that marriage itself is being discouraged by the law.

In certain of the northeastern states there has been a mania for curing all "recal and referendum" in order to do things quick. What is the result?

Mr. E. J. Lewis of Indianapolis (News a newspaper addressed to the advocates of "progressive" doctrine was sent to Oregon and Washington recently to investigate and report on the work of the recal and referendum.

He reports that the system is breaking down of its own weight. Elections have been multiplied until they are like the elections of Egypt, and the people are confused by the number of issues upon which they are asked to vote.

He says that when the system was first adopted in Oregon in 1902, the voters had no time for daily matters to consider. In 1904 there were two elections. In 1906 there were three. these state elections there have been endless local applications of "the initiative and referendum" in Oregon, Nevada and counties. Oregon grows no crops as abundant as its crop of endless voting.

Mr. Lewis reports the same state of things in the state of Washington, in which the city of Seattle is located. He says:

"The use of the recall and the referendum of many questions to the people, causing such a multiplicity of elections that the people are already inclined to be weary. For example, in the last year and a half Seattle has had almost a constant series of elections. Last year in February came the non-partisan municipal election, followed in March by the municipal election, then between March and September a technical election and constant and vigorous agitation for the recall of the newly-elected mayor; in September came the Statewide primary, in November the State and national election, in December a part of Seattle election, and in June, this year, another port election.

"The question naturally arises: How long can people stand this? One of the most important elections in this list was the last election, in which the people were called to give approval or to reject different proposals on the $200,000 harbor work. Only 20 per cent of the people went to the polls. Such a state of things makes a parallel of grafting for ward-healers and a sort of men who take money out of elections; but it is a staggering burden to the worthy people who live by honest toil and have no time for daily balloting.

Mr. Lewis shows also that there are other evils inherent in the system. He says: "The frequent elections. He goes on to say:

"The truth of the assertion that the people are wholly unable to prepare themselves to vote intelligently on many of the long and complex proposals submitted (some of which are elaborate reconstruction schemes for taxation and state government) seems beyond dispute. Even Jonathan Bourne, while still a Senator from Oregon, admitted that he had voted on only three of the forty questions of legislation which were on the State ballot because he did not understand or know about the others. He offered the excuse that he had been out of the State for a long time until he returned for the closing of the campaign."

Think of what that means. It is dreadful to contemplate! It means the perdition of politics. It is time for the American people to abandon the superstition of adorning the ballot and praying to the ballot box.

Man takes his flirting lightly, and woman takes hers tragically, but both of them must pay the piper equally!

And though they are exchanging a cheap commodity, they must pay the good coin of true love.

What is love's medium of exchange?

"Kisses," murmurs seventeen. "Work," says the wife. "Tears," sobs the widow. And "regret" sighs the flirt, man or woman. But all these are only the copper, nickel, paper and silver currency in the kingdom of love.

The standard of value, the golden coin of love is the opinion of the beloved!

And therefore do all those who first pay the highest price for their bargain court samples of inflation sentiment. Paid for in the coin of the other's opinion. And because he, the other's opinion, and it eventually leads to emotional bankruptcy, prove all that a model husband should be, that whatever he is or is not will magnify common civility to another woman into a crime.

And that is the very high cost of man's flirting.

There is no horror so great to a woman as to lose the good opinion of the man she loves.

There is no experience so fatal to the peace of man as to lose the faith of the woman who loves him. And, therefore, is flirting a scary venture.

In the homes and churches of the people there are more sacred responsibilities and far wider opportunities for arresting evils and promoting good things that can be found at the peddlers and in the booths for ballots.

We have too many elections, too many laws, and far too many reformers. We need more personal religion and individual conscience. Our reformers ought to quit reforming everybody but themselves—FOR A FEW DAYS AT LEAST.

Man takes his flirting lightly, and woman takes hers tragically, but both of them must pay the piper equally!

And though they are exchanging a cheap commodity, they must pay the good coin of true love.

What is love's medium of exchange?

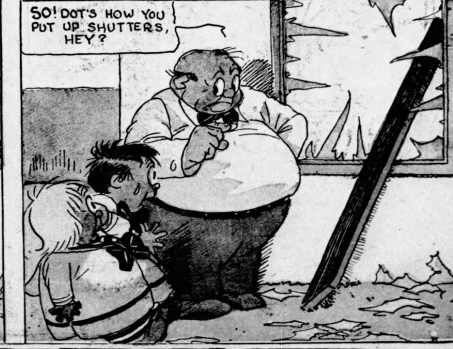

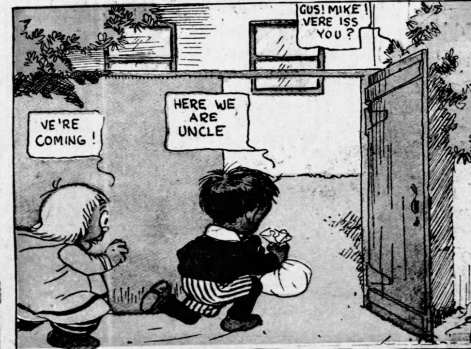

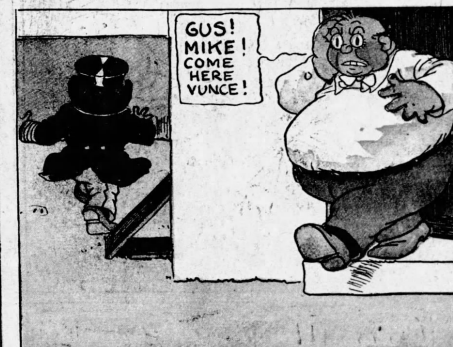

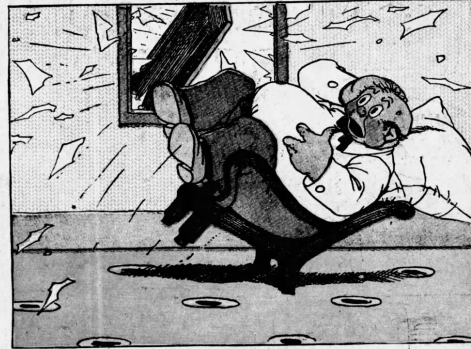

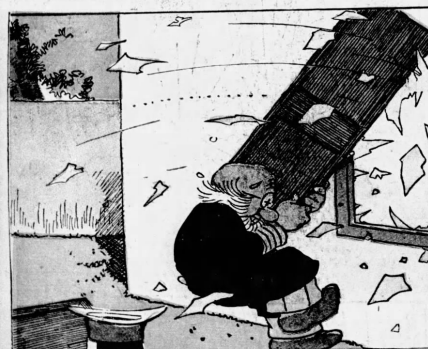

"Kisses," murmurs seventeen. "Work," says the wife. "Tears," sobs the widow. And "regret" sighs the flirt, man or woman. But all these are only the copper, nickel, paper and silver currency in the kingdom of love.
